'Axis Sally' Drew Top Radio Pay, Ex-Nazi Says

Defense Attorney Calls Miss Gillars Dupe of 'Hypnotic' Reich Professor

By Howard L. Dutkin

Miss Mildred E. Gillars, 48, dubbed "Axis Sally" by virtue of her wartime propaganda broadcasts from Germany, yesterday was described as the highest-paid broadcaster in the Reich with a monthly salary equivalent to $800-$1200.

The salary figure was quoted by Adelbert Houben, 40, cocky little (5-ft.-4) former broadcast manager of the German radio Overseas Service, shortly after Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin had told District Court the woman was the dupe of a "hypnotic" Nazi professor.

The trim, silver-haired 48-year-old defendant is facing a possible death sentence on treason charges emanating from her broadcasts to Yanks in the field and their families at home. One of her programs, according to the Government, was called "Home Sweet Home," and others were "Sweet at the Mike" and "Medical Reports."

Houben's Testimony
In his testimony Houben insisted that the main purpose of the elaborate Nazi shortwave broadcasting system was to "sell the American people that they were fighting on the wrong side. That they should fight Communism to save Christianity and Western civilization."

"What was to unite among the allies?" Prosecutor John M. Kelley asked.

"That was included in the main purpose—to prevent the American people from being a Soviet ally," the witness replied.

"How about anti-Semitism?" Kelley pursued.

"Just in connection with the Communist danger. We pointed to links between Jews and Communism."

In answer to other questions, Houben asserted "we were trying to tell the American people that Roosevelt would sell his country to the Soviet Union. In connection with anti-Semitism we pointed out that Roosevelt in his time had Jewish advisers. We tried always to show the connection between Jews and communism."

Joined Nazis in 1932
Beginning his testimony, Houben said he first joined the Nazi Party in 1932 while he was in Colombia, South America.

He said he returned to Germany in 1933 and the following year became broadcast manager for German Overseas Service "part of the German broadcasting system."

He identified the German radio as coming under Goebbels Ministry of Public Enlightenment and Propaganda and financed by fees collected by the police department.

Roadway Blocked When Ice Grounds Southbound Geese

St. Louis, Jan. 25 (U.P.)—A severe ice storm that paralyzed morning traffic today also grounded a flock of southbound geese in the middle of a traffic artery.

The wild geese, wings burdened with tiny ice particles, flapped helplessly out of the sky on Natural Bridge Road in the West End.

Watchmen at a nearby plant said the groundfired geese honked plaintively as they flapped about the street and sidewalks.

Motorists stopped in such numbers that a traffic jam developed, bringing police to the scene.

After about an hour the birds' body-heat acted as a deficer and the last of them resumed their trip to the South.

New Insignia Also Selected Distinctive Slate-Blue Uniform Is Adopted by U. S. Air Force

The Air Force yesterday adopted a distinctive new uniform of its own—slate blue in color and with entirely different insignia.

Generally similar in style to the present khaki, the new uniform will go into use gradually, with complete replacement expected by September 1, 1950, it was said.

President Truman and Defense Secretary Forrestal already have approved the shift, it was said.

The new garb for enlisted men will be bought from regular funds for uniforms. Officers must buy their own—an outlay of $350 and up.

Major change besides the color—which is called "Uxbridge blue"—and is slightly darker than the RAF uniforms—lies in the accoutrements.

All leather worn by airmen will be black instead of tan. That goes for shoes, cap visor and strap. Present gold buttons and insignia will be replaced by oxidized silver. Buttons bear the new USAF seal.

The traditional wing and prop and collar insignia are out. So are Air Force shoulder patches. The new uniform is identical for both officers and enlisted men, except for rank insignia.

Officers will wear a metal "U. S." insignia on the lapels, their rank on the shoulder as now and the present cap device in the new color. Enlisted men will wear a metal "U. S." with a circle around it on each lapel and a new style cap device. It is identical with the officers' except it is smaller and has a circle about it.

For the present, the new slate blue shade will apply only to the overcoat—which appears shorter than the present khaki—and an 18 oz. serge winter service uniform. The latter has both the battle jacket and a belted blouse with "belled" pockets.

A light blue shirt and midnight blue tie will be worn with both. The khaki summer uniform will be regulation for the present.

though the Air Force is working on a new summer garb.

Aviation cadets will shift into a new blue uniform, similar to the present one, this April. Dark blue and silver gray shoulder boards will designate cadet rank.

What Is 'Underdeveloped Area'?
What, for example, is meant by an "underdeveloped area"? What should have priority—industrial development, agriculture, public health, or all three?

If the job requires technicians, how shall they be recruited, and how much will it cost to put them to work? And how will the United States Government bring other governments and United Nations agencies into the work?

These are some of the questions on which Acheson is seeking staff opinions. He may have some of the first tentative answers ready at his first press conference, scheduled for 10:30 this morning.

Officials emphasized again yesterday that the President's "bold new program," as they conceived it, did not involve vast expenditures. The chief cost in the first year, at least, was expected to originate in the recruitment and payment of engineers, doctors, farm experts and other specialists who might be needed in many parts of the world.

Merger With Marshall Plan
Special Ambassador W. Averell Harriman said yesterday, after a talk with President Truman, that much of the President's new program could be merged with the Marshall Plan without new legislation.

The Economic Cooperation Administration already has 6 million dollars that can be spent for technical assistance. Little has been spent with this fund so far, but the plan to bring about 525 British factory managers and workers to the United States, announced on Monday, will be financed in part from this source.

Another source of ECA help in backward areas like southern Italy, or in colonial territories, is the so-called counterpart funds of local currencies, set aside by each recipient country in amounts equivalent to the Marshall Plan.

Use of the entire general fund treasury surplus, estimated at $25,539,000, was recommended by the Governor for a pay-as-you-go capital improvement program.

The difference between a recommended $73,172,000 for general fund allowances and the total budget figure, Lane explained, is an estimated $57,673,000 in already earmarked revenues.

Lane said the State's bonded debt—for capital improvements—will be $25,849,000 on July 1. With taxable property worth $3,900,000,000 next year, the real estate levy can be cut from a fraction over 11

Dr. Peter Marshall, Chaplain Of Senate, Dies Unexpectedly

Dr. Peter Marshall, 46, chaplain of the Senate and pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, died at 8:15 a. m. yesterday of a heart ailment in George Washington Hospital.

He was stricken at his residence, 3100 Cathedral ave. n. w., at about 3 a. m. Dr. Walter Bloedorn, medical director of the hospital, was called, and he ordered Dr. Marshall taken to the hospital.

In his last Senate prayer on Monday, Dr. Marshall asked for God's blessing on Vice President Barkley and for greater wisdom on the part of Senators.

Acheson Issued Order To Work on Scheme As One of His First Acts as Secretary

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr. Post Reporter

The State Department, under its new leadership, has already begun to translate President Truman's ideas on the world's underdeveloped areas into a "plan of action."

The order to work out such a plan was issued by Secretary Dean Acheson last Friday as one of his first official acts after being sworn in.

Preliminary planning is now going on under the direction of Paul Nitze, deputy to Assistant Secretary Willard Thorp, who played an outstanding role in formulating the Marshall Plan in 1947.

Now, as then, the White House looks to the State Department to pull together the experience and advice of all the scattered government agencies working on world recovery.

Acheson's staff is trying to give greater precision to the President's words of last Thursday about "making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas."

What, for example, is meant by an "underdeveloped area"? What should have priority—industrial development, agriculture, public health, or all three?

New Policy Cuts Into Supplies for Civilians; 39 Pct. Of Goal Reached

By John G. Norris Post Reporter

Munitions Board Chief Donald F. Carpenter yesterday announced a speedup in the stockpiling of critically scarce materials for a national emergency.

Under a new policy, he said, such materials now are being bought for storage even though it will cut into supplies needed to fill current civilian demands.

The entire 525-million-dollar stockpiling appropriation for fiscal 1949 already has been spent or earmarked under the speedup program, Carpenter said. When these supplies are delivered, the national stockpile will be up to 39 per cent of its planned size.

Copper, Zinc, Lead Named
Just what civilian goods will be affected by the speedup was not indicated, though a spokesman for the Munitions Board said that goods requiring quantities of copper, zinc and lead will feel the greatest impact.

He doubted that civilian needs will be affected "too badly."

Officials declared the increased tempo of the storage program was not due to any imminence of war. They declared, however, that the continuation of the cold war had been a major factor, coupled with the passing of the postwar conversion period.

"There was a general feeling that greater emphasis needs to be given to stockpiling even though it means some impact on the civilian economy," said the board spokesman.

Carpenter stressed that "while in some cases it may be necessary to cut into supplies needed to fill civilian demands, this will mean only the deferment of a few requirements now so that the country will not be dangerously short of critical materials later."

For Civilian Use, Too
He noted that the stockpile would be used both for essential civilian and military needs in an emergency.

Since the start of the stockpiling program just after the war, Government policy has been that purchases for storage were made only where they would not conflict with civilian needs. Thus the essential stocks have been accumulated slowly.

Now, however, materials costing $1,448,000,000 have been stockpiled at military depots throughout the country or have been earmarked for purchase. A supplemental 1949 appropriation of 40 million dollars cash and 270 million dollars contract authority will be asked of Congress shortly, while 525 million dollars has been budgeted for fiscal 1950.

This spending program still will leave the stockpile about 1.4 billion short of the goal. The total planned value of the pile $3,693,000,000—is not expected to be reached before fiscal 1952—a year later than originally contemplated.

Carpenter gave this progress report on the stockpile:

Enough materials have been contracted for or promised by private industry to meet the goal.

House Home Rule Move Set; D. C. Streamlining Possibility

President Could Take Action Under Reorganization

By Thomas Winship Post Reporter

The President would be able to institute by executive order most District government departmental reforms proposed in the Acheson home rule plan if the proposed reorganization bill is enacted.

He would not have power to grant home rule in any form, however, or suggest changes in congressional procedure on local bills.

On officer of the Federal Bureau Bureau yesterday gave The Washington Post an interpretation of the Administration reorganization proposal as it affects the city government.

The Acheson plan, in addition to proposing home rule, outlined major reforms in an admittedly "cumbersome" governmental organization.

Administratively, the Acheson plan would streamline District activities of more than 80 local and Federal agencies into 12 departments under a District manager. These would be health, welfare, recreation, public safety, finance, law, public works, libraries, labor, commerce, correction, and a department of professional and occupational standards.

Schools would be run by an elected board of education, though under the presidential reorganization bill—now being heard by the House Plans Fast Hearings On Labor Law

By Sam Stavisky Post Reporter

Administration leaders in the Senate, taking their cue from the House, are arranging for "quickie" hearings to kill off the Taft-Hartley Act, it was learned yesterday.

House strategy, it is understood, calls for setting up an eight-man subcommittee of the House Labor Committee to conduct the hearings, expected to last no more than a week.

Representative Augustine B. Kelley of Pennsylvania, third ranking Democrat on the committee, is slated to head the subcommittee.

St. John's College Dean, Aide Resign at President's Request

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 25 (U.P.)—The dean and assistant dean of St. John's College have resigned at the request of President John S. Kieffer.

Announcing this today, Kieffer said Dean Raymond N. Wilburn and Assistant Dean Luke Harvey Poe, Jr., had been asked to quit because of "administrative difficulties."

Kieffer would not elaborate beyond stating that "they have offered their resignations and I have accepted them."

The resignations, said Kieffer, are effective immediately.

Wilburn and Poe were second and third in command, respectively, at the widely known "100 great books" institution.

A third official, treasurer Harrison Fiddess, also reportedly has been asked to quit.

Vast Operation To Save Cattle Is Stepped Up

By The Associated Press

Planes, Army bulldozers, trucks and foot parties were pressed into the battle to save snowbound western livestock Tuesday. The rescue operation was one of the most widespread of its kind ever undertaken.

New cold, snow, sleet and floods meanwhile hit various sections in the western half of the country.

In Washington, the Senate Interior Committee approved a $750,000 emergency fund to finance rescue work in Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, North Dakota and Montana. The South Dakota Legislature also approved such a fund.

James T. Ivy, ECA regional director in Tientsin, is said to have been assured of Communist cooperation in completing the project.

After that, it will be up to Washington to decide on future policy. ECA halted all new shipments to North China last week.

The bulk of the supplies, estimated at $4,166,000 by ECA officials here, are in Tientsin. Only 50 tons of flour were believed in Peiping because it was cut off by the fighting last December.

ECA said millions of dollars worth of goods are either en route to China or have been landed.

Tulsa Rental Group To Evict Tenants

Sawyer Spearhead Drive Pushed For Controls On Inflation

By The Associated Press

The Administration stuck to its insistence on "mandatory" anti-inflation powers as it pressed Congress yesterday for a stopgap extension of the GOP's voluntary controls.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer spearheaded the new drive to win Capitol Hill approval of President Truman's broad economic program which includes his oft-repeated requests for standby authority to put clamps on such things as credit rents, exports and scarce commodities.

Sawyer told a Senate Banking Subcommittee the Administration soon will ask "mandatory powers" over distribution of steel and other essential goods in short supply. Until Mr. Truman's "broader economic program" has been detailed, he said a "temporary extension becomes necessary to keep the present program on a going basis."

Due to Expire Feb. 28

The so-called voluntary allocation agreements program is due to expire February 28. It was enacted by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress as a substitute for Mr. Truman's proposals for Government-enforcing rationing. Under this plan, industries which agreed to set up their own rationing system were exempt from certain anti-trust laws.

Committee members questioned Sawyer at length on the operations of the steel industry's self-rationing plan. Several were critical of the proportionate distribution which they said worked hardships on small business. About one-tenth of the country's steel production is channeled to essential users by the voluntary program.

Senator Robertson (D., Va.), for example, said that some small firms "have to pay a premium price to nail bootleggers."

And Senator Sparkman (D., Ala.) read letters from small businessmen who make cast iron soil pipe for the building industry, protesting that most pig iron "went to the big boys."

Sawyer contended that the voluntary system is "not the complete solution to our stabilization problems." But he added that it "has been successful thus far in overcoming many of the problems."

At the same time he predicted a shortage this year of seven million tons of finished steel products.

System Will Be Revised

"If we get mandatory powers," he said, the present steel supply system will be revised to correct flaws reported by the Senators.

That was Sawyer's reply to a suggestion from Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) that Commerce Department officials "put some real teeth" into the voluntary plan.

The voluntary agreements extension plan was given a priority rating by both the Senate and House Banking Committees, with export and rent controls ranking next.

Following yesterday's appearance before the Senate group, Secretary Sawyer was scheduled to carry the Administration case to the other side of the Capitol Thursday.

Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking Committee said his group will consider the steel question then and will open hearings Monday on export controls, with the rent law extension bill scheduled for later next week.

Rent Ceiling Suit Against U. S. Is Approved by Judge Myers

Judge Frank H. Myers ruled yesterday that the Federal Government can be sued like any other landlord if it charges over-renting on Federal housing.

The Municipal Court judge made the decision in ordering to trial a case involving the National Capital Housing Authority as landlord, and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Kalstein, 717 48th st. se., in a Benning rd. housing development.

The NCHA sued for $284 back rent from the Kalsteins, who in turn counterclaimed for $612 penalty rent overcharges.

Sustaining the position of the Kalstein attorney, Herman Miller, Judge Myers said:

"Having elected to enter the competitive housing field as a 'landlord' and not having been specifically exempted by Congress from accountability for violations of the District Rent Act, it seems wholly consistent to apply all provisions of the housing statute to Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 25 (AP)—The Rev. Wallace J. Murphy, executive secretary of the Tulsa Property Owners Association, said between 600 and 1000 eviction notices will be sent to tenants tonight.

Murphy said the action will be a protest to two rent control bills he said were before Congress and which he termed "intolerable."

In a statement, Murphy said: "Property owners will withdraw all rental property from the rental market. Tenants will receive 60-day notices to vacate. We refuse to operate so long as rental controls are on."

"We don't intend to serve under a slavery which would take away the right to control our property. It is not enough that we must rent our property at a loss. Now they want to fine us and put us in jail."

The minister, who is honorary president of the Property Owners Association of America, said members of the association's affiliates in 20 other cities had been asked to take similar action.

These, he said, included Chicago, Kansas City, Houston and San Antonio, Tex.; Detroit, St. Louis, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; and Danville, Ill.

Responses from some, Murphy said, indicated they would do so.

The United Press quoted the Rev. Mr. Murphy as saying the association has named Frank Pope of Tulsa as national chairman of a conference in Washington February 14 for all persons opposed to any extension of rent controls. He said all parts of the country will be represented at the conference, and that several carloads of persons planned to leave Tulsa alone for the meeting.

It said he is a retired Baptist minister.

(The association apparently has no office or branch in Washington; its name was not known in real estate circles contacted last night.)

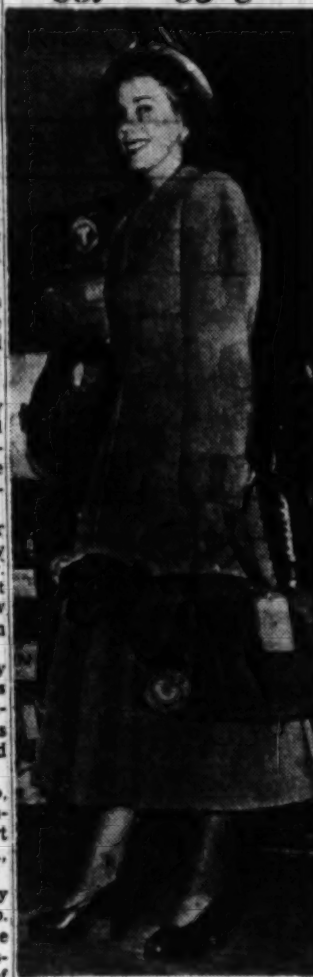

The Tulsa Association is composed principally of owners of small properties scattered throughout the city.

The Rev. Mr. Murphy said the bills opposed by the association are Senate Bill 423 and the House bill he said was drawn by Tighe Woods, National Housing Expediter.

The legislation provides additional power for the expediter, and permits fines up to $5000 and a year in jail for convicted violators, the Rev. Mr. Murphy said.

Congress Due to Restrict President's Power In Reorganization; Bill Exemptions Planned

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

In spite of requests by both President Truman and former President Herbert Hoover, Congress will not give Mr. Truman carte-blanc authority to reorganize all agencies in the executive department.

This was virtually decided yesterday in two developments:

1. The House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments heard Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren "strongly favor and recommend" giving the President power to order departmental reorganization.

The questioning brought out clearly, however, that the committee did not consider extending that power to cover the General Accounting Office headed by Warren. GAO would be automatically exempted, members agreed, because it is a legislative, not an executive, agency, and is answerable to Congress, not to the President.

2. After a meeting at the White House attended by Speaker Sam Rayburn, Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), majority leader, and Representative John W. McCord (D., Mass.), House Democratic leader, Rayburn told newsmen that four other agencies will be exempted from the reorganization bill. This bill would empower the President to reorganize departments subject to veto by both Houses of Congress.

These agencies, exempted because they are "quasi-legislative" and "quasi-judicial" as well as administrative, are Federal Reserve Board, Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission and Securities and Exchange Commission.

Rayburn added that other agencies, which he called "fringes," probably will be included in the reorganization bill. These include the Federal Communications Commission and Maritime Commission.

Earlier Warren had suggested to the House Expenditures Committee that the administration duties of all these agencies might be transferred to an administrative unit, leaving the agencies with just their "quasi-judicial" and "quasi-legislative" operations.

At present, Warren said, these agencies not only make rulings but also enforce them. Instead of operating as the courts, which make their rulings but leave enforcement to other agencies.

Warren called the present governmental setup a "hodge-podge and crazy-quilt of duplications, overlappings, inefficiencies and inconsistencies with their attendant extravagance."

"It is probably an ideal system for the tax eaters and those who wish to keep themselves perpetually attached to the public test, but it is bad for those who have to pay the bill," he said.

"That is why I say the Government should put its house in order."

Yesterday afternoon the Hoover Commission on Reorganization of the executive branch met in the Senate Expenditures Committee room. Many of its future meetings will be held there, it was stated, to give two members, Senators George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) and John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), an opportunity to attend.

The commission plans to start releasing its reports or reorganization to Congress in about 10 days.

If the commission goes ahead with announced plans to recommend reorganization of the GAO, a sharp report by a minority headed by McClellan will accompany that recommendation, it was reported last night. Any reorganization of GAO will require special legislation.

Hearings on New Rent Law to Bring CIO Fight

Post Reporter

Public hearings on new Federal rent control legislation are slated to open next week before the House Banking Committee, Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.), announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, the CIO threw its weight behind proposals to include the administration of rent control in the District of Columbia under Federal jurisdiction.

Leo Goodman, director of the CIO housing committee, said the CIO would fight for the inclusion of the District of Columbia in any Federal law adopted, rather than having the District be the subject of separate legislation.

Goodman said that among the features of the rent control bill introduced by Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, which the CIO backs, is the specific inclusion of the District under Federal law.

"The Eightieth Congress gave us a bad rent law and the poor administration of the act is acknowledged in its breach," Goodman said.

"The CIO will fight to get an effective rent law and a good administration. The Myers bill (introduced in the Senate by Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.) and the Douglas bill come the closest to the legislative proposals of the CIO convention," he added.

Goodman's statement was taken to mean that the CIO prefers the Myers and Douglas measures to the so-called administration bill recently introduced in both Houses as drafted by the Office of the Housing Expediter.

Chairman Connolly (D., Tex.) announced yesterday that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee expects to open hearings February 8 on the Economic Cooperation Administration's request for new foreign aid funds.

"We hope to prepare a bill to cover the entire 15 months' period after March 31," Connolly told reporters. Current ECA funds will be exhausted by March 31.

The Douglas measure, unlike the agency bill, calls for a roll-back of all 15 per cent rent increases agreed upon by landlords and tenants.

The Douglas and Myers bill also, Goodman said, spell out strong safeguards against evictions.

While the House group goes ahead with rent control hearings in order to meet the March 31 deadline of the expiration of the present law, the Senate Banking Committee prepared for housing hearings.

Chairman Burnet Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee named Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.) chairman of a subcommittee on a housing program to include low rental public housing and slum clearance.

Sparkman said he hopes to begin hearings Wednesday, February 2.

Loan Asked To Expand Steel Output

The Lone Star Steel Co. of Lone Star, Tex., has filed the first application for a steel production loan under the President's proposal to expand production facilities. It was disclosed last night.

Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.), a leading exponent of Mr. Truman's plan to put the Government in the steel production business if necessary to overcome present shortages, announced the move.

Patman said the Lone Star company, now producing pig iron from local ores, has asked the RFC for a $5-million-dollar loan to build an integrated steel mill having 200,000 tons a year capacity.

Urges 3 More Plants

At the same time, Patman urged construction, by the Government, of at least five more blast furnaces and steel mills in other parts of the country in view of the great need for steel in our national defense program and our own domestic demands.

In his state of the Union message, Mr. Truman proposed an immediate study of production facilities in critically short materials, such as steel. He proposed Government loans for expansion, if needed, and said the Government should be authorized to construct such plants directly if private industry fails to meet the need.

Bills granting the RFC 15 billion dollars more loan authority to carry out the program were introduced in the House by Patman and in the Senate by Senators James E. Murray (D., Mont.) and John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.).

The legislation is still far from the hearing stage, but Patman said the RFC is now in a position to make loans of the type asked by the Lone Star company, situated in his own district.

The Texas Democrat, who appealed for Government aid in developing east Texas steel potentials before and after the President's message, told news-

'Big Steel' Opposition

"There is at least a 10-million-ton shortage of steel in our economy annually. This could be made up in the Southwest area. We have the ore, the coking coal, the limestone and the manganese," Patman charged that "Big Steel's" opposition to the move makes Government aid necessary.

Erected for the Government during the war by the Defense Plant Corp., the Lone Star plant never went on a complete production basis under the Government, and was sold to a group of Southwest business leaders in 1947 for 75 million dollars.

Patman said the plant is now producing 100,000 tons of pig iron a day from local raw materials, and is making $350,000 a month after taxes.

Truman Asks 480 Millions In Extra Funds

President Truman asked Congress yesterday for $480,702,340 to pay Government expenses not anticipated when appropriations were made for the current fiscal year ending next July 1.

Nearly all of the 60 items were included in his revised estimates for this fiscal year submitted to Congress two weeks ago with the 1950 budget.

The largest items in today's request:

1. For grants to States for public assistance (aid to the aged indigent) to meet the Federal share under Social Security law changes which became effective October 1, 1948—$151 million dollars.
 2. For national service life insurance for veterans, largely to meet unanticipated claims originating in the Philippines—$55 million dollars.
 3. Veterans miscellaneous benefits, including, but not limited to, supplies and equipment for disabled veteran trainees, and aid to disabled veterans in acquiring special housing—$44,189,000.
- (Decreases in the 1950 budget, the President said, will be submitted later to offset part of the additional veterans requests for fiscal 1949).
4. Mail transportation and mail messenger service—70 million dollars.
- The President also asked $3,450,000 for TVA. Of this, three million dollars is to start construction of a steam plant at New Johnsonville, Tenn., and $450,000 to begin construction of two additional hydro-generating units, one at Guntersville Dam, Ala., and one at Chickamauga Dam, Tenn.
- Other requests included $2500 for an automobile for Vice President Barkley.

Southern Democrats yesterday lost a first round in their developing fight to prevent early action on anti-filibuster changes in Senate rules.

Senate Rules Chairman Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) told them to wind up their case on the proposed change on Friday so the Rules Committee can act next week.

Hayden has predicted a majority of his committee will support a bipartisan resolution removing loopholes in the Senate's existing two-thirds cloture rule.

Fighting for longer hearings, Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) told the Rules Committee that 7 or 8 Southern Senators wanted to testify on the change, starting this morning. He said he did not know whether they could conclude Friday.

Extra Hearings Asked

Earlier, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), backed up by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) called for morning and afternoon hearings if necessary to close hearings on the rules change this week.

Knowland said it was "a matter of the utmost importance" that the Rules Committee speed a debate-limit resolution to the floor early in the session, so it won't bog down in the pressure of other measures.

"I don't see why anybody in kingdom come should be debating this proposition (two-thirds cloture)," said Ives.

The Southern members protested vigorously when Knowland first proposed that the committee return in afternoon session yesterday to hear the Dixie Senators.

Stennis said Knowland was trying to "force" Southern Senators before the committee like "galley slaves" before they had adequate notice. Knowland said everyone had plenty of notice.

Senator Russell Long (D., La.), son of Louisiana's late "Kingfish," broke in to charge that Republicans were trying "steamroller" tactics.

"I didn't see anything in the President's program about changing the rules of the Senate," said Long. "I don't see why it won't wait."

Hayden practically settled the argument by saying he thought the hearings could close Friday without afternoon sessions.

Outcome Uncertain

What will happen in the Senate, however, is anybody's guess. A motion to call up any bill, including the rules change, is still subject to endless debate.

One Democratic and three Republican proponents of the rules reform meanwhile completed their testimony, nearly all of them stressing that some future filibuster might imperil national defense. They were:

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), who urged approval of his own plan to limit debate by a two-thirds vote after a bill had been debated ten days.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), who said the Senate ought to go further and require Senators to stick to subjects under discussion.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), who urged a tightened two-thirds rule as "a short step forward in the effectiveness of parliamentary procedure."

Peril to Security

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), who warned that national security can be imperiled by a filibuster.

Morse said such a filibuster was conducted against the draft law last year. Morse did not mention the name of Senator Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), who conducted the night-long filibuster against the draft law.

"I happen to believe that last spring there was evidence that Russia intend to take Italy by ballot or force," said Morse, "and yet we were threatened by a filibuster that would have affected national defense."

Pepper said that most of the 40 famous filibusters of the last half-century were on questions of national importance and even "world-shaking significance."

"We never know when a particular bill or matter vital to war or peace or to the prosperity or impoverishment of our country may be subject to the obstructionist tactics of the filibusters," said Pepper.

'Axis Sally' Jury Out to Lunch...

Kelley asked: Are you acquainted with the defendant?"

"Yes, sir."

"That lady sitting there," Houben answered nodding toward Miss Gillars who stared back at him impassively, her right hand nervously fingering a handkerchief.

Houben said he first met the defendant in Berlin in 1941 when she was a "freelance" announcer. He said she was hired in 1943 as a freelance to broadcast to the American radio zone.

At about that time, Houben said, a Dr. Otto Kolschitz (the "hypnotic" professor referred to earlier by Laughlin and, according to relatives of Miss Gillars, the former fiancé of the defendant) became head of United States zone operations.

Houben declared that Miss Gillars "participated" in programs "directed to the United States soldiers in Africa trying to convince them they were fighting on the wrong side."

Salary 2000 to 3000 Marks

After Houben stated he had signed pay-claims of Miss Gillars, Kelley demanded: "State the monthly earnings of the defendant during that period."

"She averaged 2000 to 3000 marks a month," Houben answered. (The mark at that time was worth about 40 cents at the fixed exchange rate.)

Further questioning drew the statement from Houben that Miss Gillars' pay was next only to that of the director general of the broadcasting company.

Questioned about a program "Vision of Invasion," Houben said Miss Gillars played the part of an American mother who, in a dream saw her son dying aboard a torpedoed ship as it sought to gain the French shore. This program, he said, was beamed to United States soldiers and their families at home.

Aims of Broadcasts

Pressed to explain the aims of such broadcasts, the witness continued to assert they were strictly to prevent "Germans" from being destroyed as a military force against Communism.

At this Kelley leaned forward and pointing a finger at Houben exclaimed: "Did you not testify in other proceedings of the United States that one purpose relative to the invasion broadcasts was to put fear into the United States people?"

"I did not," Houben answered firmly and repeated his denial under quizzing by Federal Judge Edward M. Curran, presiding at the trial.

At another point in describing a program of messages from Americans in German prisons and hospitals, Houben declared the messages were handed down from the supreme command to radio officials who in turn gave them to underlings for broadcast.

"Did the defendant add anything to those messages?" Kelley demanded.

"She had written messages and read them as they came in. I don't know if she added anything or not."

Kelley, declaring complete surprise, the first step in making a statement to the prosecutor.

The day's last Government witness, Frank X. Green, a radio engineer of 1527 28th st. se., revealed the secret operation of a Government-operated radio interception and monitoring station at Silver Hill, Md., from 1941 to 1946.

Green said he was in charge of the operation known as "Shenda" (Silver Hill National Defense Activities).

He described how his staff of technicians, operating high powered receiving outfit, probed the airwaves 24 hours a day for enemy broadcasts, recording them on special cellulose-composition records called memovox.

Early Broadcasts Cited

In his opening statement to the jury, Kelley said he would prove the defendant fed "sugar-coated pills of propaganda" designed to aid the Nazis by sowing dissension and fear in the minds of the American public and its troops.

He identified a number of records placed in evidence. These will be played in court probably Thursday, Kelley told reporters. The recordings are understood to be those of broadcasts attributed to Miss Gillars.

Public Housing Need Stressed

New York, Jan. 25 (U.P.)—Free enterprise has "failed to find a solution" to the housing problem, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said tonight.

"While I am a great believer in free enterprise, this happens to be a field where it has failed to find a solution," the Senate Republican policy chairman told the Mortgage Bankers Association of America in a prepared address.

"I have found no alternative to public housing as a method of providing low income rentals to those at the bottom of the income scale. There is no reason why the public housing program should compete with, or interfere in any way, with the private housing industry. Those who are opposed to public housing have done their own industry a disservice by their indiscriminate and unreasoning opposition."

They should, he said, "promote the plan and spend their energy and funds in confining it to its proper scope . . . They have invited more radical housing measures and have assisted the critics of free enterprise."

Taft was a coauthor of the long-disputed Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill which Congress never passed. He and several other Republican Senators are preparing a similar measure as their answer to an Administration-sponsored bill calling for 1,050,000 home a year.

Under private industry and "left to itself, the slum condition has continued without improvement," he declared. He added that the main trouble is that housing costs are out of line with average income.

He said that until housing costs are reduced, "I see no way to cure the situation except by some direct Government action."

GOP's Party Row Brought Into Open

"farther to the left than Mr. Truman."

Kelland, asked what he would do if Republican liberals like Senators Baldwin, Morse, Aiken and Tobey got control of the party, exploded and said:

Scott Fights for Post

Mrs. F. Peavy Heffelfinger, national committeewoman for Minnesota, made public a resolution she is going to introduce calling on Scott to get out because, in the minds of the people, he represents the twice-defeated Governor Dewey.

Chairman Scott, accusing his enemies of being Whigs who wanted to go back to the days of Garfield, was fighting hard to hold on to a post to which Governor Dewey appointed him after the Philadelphia convention in June.

He said he had assurances from at least two thirds of the committeemen and committeewomen that they were on his side.

Answering the charge that he owed allegiance to no presidential candidate, past or prospective.

He told reporters that the New Yorker couldn't and wouldn't be nominated by the GOP in 1952.

"Anonymous" Notes Discussed

Scott sounded off about the anonymous, under-the-door notes after Kelland and others had started counting noses to see if they had the strength to oust him.

He said the notes purported to show that he had made wire recordings of remarks made over the long-distance telephone toward the end of the 1948 campaign by National committeemen—remarks to the effect that the campaign was going fine and that a Dewey victory was sure.

Scott said that a wire recording was made at GOP headquarters in Washington, but not by him. The man who did it, he said, was Herbert Brownell, one of Dewey's campaign managers. He emphasized that Brownell made the recordings with the knowledge and consent of the committeemen.

Scott admitted that he had a transcription of what was said in the telephone calls, and recorded on wire, but insisted that he never intended to use it to the advantage of anyone.

Merry Menagerie—By Walt Disney

"Well! No wonder my call kept getting a busy signal!"

What was the reason for keeping such a transcription, he was asked. His answer was: "If there was any challenge by people inclined to say 'I told you so' after the election, then the recordings would indicate that the memory can be a very faulty thing."

He said he didn't know who had written the anonymous notes that were slipped under the hotel doors. He noted, however, that they read just as one particular national committeeman talked. Who that committeeman was, he wouldn't say.

"I am sorry to see such silly high-school stuff," Scott said, and it was apparent that he really was disturbed.

Carroll Reece, committeeman from Tennessee and former National chairman, said he knew nothing about the mysterious notes.

"I think it's nonsense," he said. Reece was one of those reported to be meeting with Kelland, Harrison E. Spangler of Iowa, and Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio in Room 231 of the Fontenelle, counting noses to determine whether they had the votes to dump Scott.

Brown, who was 1948 campaign manager for Senator Robert A. Taft, said he had heard about the wire recordings before he came to Omaha. He added:

"I don't have much faith or confidence in anybody, whether he be national chairman or what, who takes secret recordings and uses them for financial or political blackmail."

None of Scott's foes claimed that there were enough votes to force him out, but there were claims that the opposition was mounting. One of the difficulties was that they had not settled on a man to put up against Scott.

committee that drafted home-rule legislation. The bill went to the House floor, where it failed to pass. They are Representatives James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), leader of last year's drive for a home-rule bill; John J. Allen, Jr. (R., Calif.), also a strong home-rule supporter, and Robert E. Jones, Jr. (D., Ala.). Jones commented yesterday that he is not opposed to the home-rule idea, but he has not been as enthusiastic for the plan as some other members.

The seventh member of the group would be Representative Monroe M. Redden (D., N. C.) who recently has voiced his support of home rule.

The House District Committee holds its first organization meeting at 10:30 a. m. today in Room 445, Old House Office Building.

McMillan said he viewed the merger as a compromise which would not close the door to home rule.

For himself, McMillan said: "My mind is not closed to any home-rule bill that has merit." He said he opposed the Auchincloss bill in the last Congress because it was too sweeping a measure.

He said the record of the home-rule hearings in the last Congress is still available to the subcommittee. With that at hand, he said, new lengthy hearings would be a waste of time and duplication of effort.

Besides the new Judiciary Subcommittee, McMillan indicated there would be four other District Subcommittees, like those in operation last year. These would be Fiscal Affairs, Public Utilities, Insurance and Banking, Health, Education and Recreation, and Public Service, Streets and Traffic.

The Senate District Committee has a parallel line-up except for separate Judiciary and Home Rule Subcommittees.

President Might Order D. C. 'Streamlining'

STREAMLINE—Fr. P. 1

House Expenditures Committee—the present setup could not be changed.

The move to extend the President's reorganizing authority to the District government, in effect could separate the disputed issue of local self-rule from the less controversial question of regrouping and systematizing the city's sprawling municipal agencies.

The Commissioners already are on record in favor of such departmental streamlining.

White House authority to recommend revamping of the District government appears in Section 7 of the pending reorganization bill, which defines "agency" as also meaning "any and all parts of the municipal government of the District of Columbia except the courts thereof."

Has Hoover Backing

It also was learned yesterday that the Hoover Commission will back a presidential request to revamp the local government. The commission will recommend that the President be given permanent power to reorganize the District government except the courts.

Hinting that most of the administrative features of the Auchincloss plan would be embodied in any presidential directive under authority of the pending bill, the budget official said:

"If the Auchincloss bill does win enactment, Congress in all probability would remove from this basic legislation the President's powers to reorganize the District government."

"It should be made perfectly clear that this separate approach to streamlining Washington municipal services does not aim to undermine or tactically interfere with the progress of the Auchincloss bill on the Hill," the spokesman added.

Would Prepare Plan

In the event that the sweeping reorganization bill is approved by Congress early this session, the official disclosed that the Budget Bureau researchers would prepare a District streamlining blueprint for submission to the President.

Double Danderine is so effective that even in some of the most severe cases, results with it have been remarkable!

There's no reason to let dandruff spoil your appearance, drive people away from you. As thousands have discovered, getting real relief is as simple as using Double Danderine. For this amazing product is totally unlike ordinary preparations that simply remove loose dandruff—which you can do with "rain water and brushing."

Double Danderine really works because it kills—and kills on contact—the germ which leading authorities say is the cause of the most common kind of dandruff. And only by destroying this germ can you get effective relief!

That's why we say Double Danderine guarantees dandruff relief! Try it. If you're not completely satisfied, return the empty bottle and your money will be refunded.

*Pityrosporum Ovale, the germ which leading authorities say is the cause of the most common kind of dandruff.

Besides consolidating strictly District agencies, it was pointed out that the President could, for example, transfer the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, National Housing Authority, Park and White House police and St. Elizabeth's Hospital entirely under District jurisdiction. Authority, functions and funds for these agencies now are divided between District and Federal bureaus.

He stressed that such transfers were not under consideration; merely illustrating examples.

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), author of the all-inclusive home rule bill, declared last night that handling only the reorganization of the District in a separate bill "would be the death knell of voting rights here."

No government "is any good," he added, "unless its people can get up and yell about it."

'Freedom' In U. S. Hit By Giesecking

WALTER GIESECKING
"Auf wiedersehen"

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—German Pianist Walter Giesecking left by plane for Paris today, asserting that he was glad to return to a country where there is true "artistic freedom."

The 53-year-old musician decided to call off his United States-Canadian concert tour and return to Europe rather than submit to an Immigration Department investigation of charges he was a wartime Nazi collaborator. He had agreed to leave by 11 a. m. today and his departure came about 45 minutes before that deadline.

The 6-foot 4-inch Giesecking, asked why he did not stay and refute the charges of Nazism, replied:

"I'm disgusted. I didn't want to go to Ellis Island. In Europe, they are nice and do not picket."

A large group of demonstrators, waving a Nazi flag and carrying placards, was outside Carnegie Hall last night to protest his appearance. The recital was canceled less than two hours before he was to appear before a capacity audience of 2760 and scuffles broke out.

A reporter asked for a statement of his views on having to return to Europe on such short notice.

"It's not fit to print," Giesecking said. "If I had not played the piano during the war and if I had joined the German army as a soldier and killed 100 American soldiers, I would be a hero. I played 50 times for the American troops in Europe and never got any pay."

Red Sees U. S. Using Germans

Berlin, Jan. 25 (AP).—A Russian spokesman told German Communists today the United States will use Germans for "cannon fodder" in a new war.

The spokesman was Col. Sergei Tulpanov, chief of the Soviet military administration's political division. He addressed a conference of the Socialist (Communist) Party of the Soviet occupation zone.

He denounced the Western Allies and the European Recovery Program.

The German Communists opened their four-day conference by aping the Russians. They created their own "Little Politburo," copied from the Communist Party organ which rules Russia. The German version will run Communist affairs in the eastern zone under the Russian occupation forces.

Bevin Pledges Aid In War on Poverty

London, Jan. 25 (P).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin pledged today that Britain will join the United States in an all-out "war on poverty" in Africa and the East. He said Russia has no reason to fear aggressive action from the West. Addressing a luncheon of the Foreign Press Association, Bevin hailed President Truman's proposal to help the world's backward areas as a major contribution to world peace.

"I think I can speak for all the powers responsible for overseas territories in saying that we welcome Mr. Truman's statement; that we shall join with them; that we will throw into the pool all the knowledge, ability and resources we have at our command," he said. Bevin said the Marshall Plan has brought the nations of western Europe closer to what has "always been my obsession—a United States of Europe." But he insisted this should not be viewed by Russians as menacing to them.

"If Western civilization can come together in one great organization, not anxious to attack but ready to talk," he declared, "others will recognize that power, and there is a reasonable chance of getting peace in the world."

Russia, he said, seems to think the Western struggle for recovery and security seeks to "build a force to defeat the Soviet government some day in the future."

"Now I assert with all the solemnity I have in mind, that that has never entered our heads," he declared.

Red Trade Bloc

MOSCOW'S ANSWER TO MARSHALL PLAN—Line-shaded countries—USSR, Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary, Rumania and Czechoslovakia—are those in the Soviet sphere of influence which have been linked together in a new trade organization sponsored by the Soviet Union. Countries in black are those participating in the Marshall Plan. Spain, Finland, Albania and Yugoslavia are the only countries in Europe not included in either plan.

Moscow, Jan. 25 (P).—The new Economic Council of Mutual Assistance organized by Soviet Russia and five of her neighbors was viewed by foreign diplomats here today as the East's answer to the West's European Recovery Program.

Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Rumania joined Russia in forming the council at a Moscow conference earlier this month.

The formation of the council was announced today, with the aim: "The exchange of experience in the economic field, the rendering of technical assistance to each other, and the rendering of mutual assistance in regard to raw materials, foodstuffs, machinery, equipment, etc."

(There is no indication, however, that Russia intends to send rubles into the economy of her associates as the United States has sent dollars to western Europe to speed recovery. Two-way trade agreements have linked members of the Soviet bloc since the end of the war.)

Officials Here Welcome Bevin's Pledge for Aid

Officials here welcomed Bevin's speech, although Britain has far fewer technicians than the United States to send abroad. The shortage of trained engineers and other experts, due partly to the war, has hampered the British government alent to the value of free grants from the United States.

This week, for example, the ECA announced that $1,200,000 worth of Italian lire had been allocated for reclamation and reconstruction work in the valley of the Volturno River in southern Italy, the scene of some of the bitterest fighting of the Italian campaign.

Harriman said yesterday that colonial powers like Britain and France would find "new impetus" from President Truman's idea. The Organization for European Economic Cooperation, representing all the Marshall Plan countries, is now working on a report on the development of colonial territories. Up to now such work has been hampered more by shortages of skilled labor and management than by a lack of funds.

Apart from ECA, the United States Government already has three main methods of providing technical help to foreign countries.

The first, with about five million dollars at its disposal this year, is the Interdepartmental Committee on Scientific and Cultural Cooperation, representing 25 Government agencies. Last year this group sent 166 technicians abroad and brought 343 here for training, chiefly from Latin America.

The second is the Export-Import Bank, which is authorized to furnish technical help in connection with its loans, chiefly to Latin America.

The third is the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, a Government cooperation which carries on agricultural, health and educational work in cooperation with 16 Latin-American countries. The institutes charter is due to be renewed this year; it has about five million dollars of United States funds, in addition to contributions from other American republics.

The United States also contributes to United Nations agencies which provide technical assistance

Cease-Fire Signed By Egypt, Israel

Lake Success, Jan. 25 (AP).—Acting Palestine Mediator Ralph J. Bunche reported to the Security Council today from Rhodes that Egypt and Israel had signed a "complete and enduring" cease-fire agreement. He said armistice talks are still going on after recent difficulties.

Bunche sent the council a text he said was signed yesterday by representatives of the two governments. The pact in effect was a formal confirmation of the cease-fire that had been accepted by both sides January 7.

The agreement said: "No element of the ground or air forces of either party shall advance beyond or pass over the line now held by foremost elements of its ground forces, and no element of naval or air forces shall enter or pass over the waters adjacent to the coastline now held by either party for any purpose whatsoever."

Israel Laborites Take Early Lead in Election

Tel Aviv, Jan. 25 (AP).—Early returns from Israel's first general election tonight gave Premier David Ben-Gurion's Laborites a big lead over the pro-Soviet United Workers Party.

The premier's pro-western Mapai Party candidates piled up large majorities in the rural collective settlements, which were the first to report. The United Workers trailed badly and the 19 other parties, including the Communists, got only a scattering of votes.

Sixty per cent of the 400,000 eligible voters had cast their ballots by sunset. The last poll was scheduled to close at midnight.

From Dan to Beersheba Jews and Arabs began to stand in queues at poll opening at 6 a. m. to select 120 members of a constituent assembly that will form a permanent government for their infant state. No incidents were reported.

1500 Jews From Cyprus Are Greeted by Salute

Haifa, Israel, Jan. 25 (AP).—A thunderous salute greeted 1500 Jews released from internment by the British and brought to Israel today in time to see their homeland's first election.

It was a happy ending to a grim story.

Two years ago, when Palestine was under British mandate, they tried to run a British blockade in the ill-fated ship Theodor Herzl. A British destroyer fired on them, and there was fierce hand-to-hand fighting with a boarding party. Two Jews were killed, 26 wounded, and all the survivors were interned on Cyprus.

Britain recently announced willingness to release all Jews from the Cyprus internment camps. Estimates of the number vary from 10,000 to 12,000. This was the first group to leave.

New Permits Are Ordered For Tourists

Buenos Aires, Jan. 25 (AP).—Tourists are going to be required to get police permits to remain in Argentina more than 72 hours under a decree announced today by President Juan D. Peron's cabinet.

Those now in Argentina were given 15 days to obtain permits. The decree apparently is aimed at business visitors who have used free tourist visas, good for a year.

Expulsion is the penalty for violation of the order. Tourists must show police permits to get hotel rooms, to deal with public officials or to travel inside the country.

The decree said Argentina's liberal policies toward tourists and immigrants had caused a great increase in the flow, and existing immigration forces were swamped, requiring police to take a hand. Possibly one fourth of Argentina's 16-million population are foreigners.

Two weeks ago President Peron announced Argentina planned, in rewriting her constitution, to require that all foreigners in the nation apply for citizenship or leave.

Seized D-Day Plans Were 5th Corps Orders

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 25 (AP). The Germans said the document was taken from the dead American officer near Vierville. Maj. Gen. Guenther Blumentritt, chief of staff of Nazi Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, was quoted as saying the document "proved this was the invasion."

The 100-page document was taken from the body of a young American officer on June 7, 1949, the day after the invasion.

However, Hitler was represented as doing nothing about it because he was convinced the Normandy operation was just a feint. Lieut. Gen. Clarence Huebner, U. S. Ground Force commander in Germany, yesterday disclosed the invasion plan was captured. Officers of the historical research division of the European Command said today the story was obtained through interrogation of German officers.

Emergency Cabinet Meeting

Acting President Li called an emergency meeting of the cabinet to make plans for immediate evacuation of the government to Canton. Li and Sun said the cabinet would remain as an "office of the government" but the government organs had almost gone.

The cabinet faced a reshuffle, with five of its members leaving. Gen. Chang Chun, minister without portfolio, resigned to take up his post as head of government forces in Chungking. Wong Wen-hao, another minister without portfolio, resigned to direct the economic reconstruction of Formosa, of which he was once governor.

Three other cabinet members resigned because they opposed the government peace policy. They were Chang Li-sheng, minister without portfolio; Ku Cheng-kang, Minister of Social Affairs; and Hung Lan-yu, Minister of the Interior.

Statewide Home Rule Measure Drawn Up For Study of Maryland General Assembly

Annapolis, Jan. 25 (Sp.).—Legislation aimed at bringing "home rule" to all incorporated communities in Maryland has been prepared for submission to the Maryland General Assembly, it was learned here tonight.

Sponsors say the proposed constitutional amendments, if successful, would affect about three-fourths of the State's population, assuming Baltimore City joins in the move as revealed by representatives of the Maryland League of Municipalities, who are conferring here with legislators.

At least one county delegation, Montgomery, has already given its support to the idea, and additional support is being solicited.

The State-wide bill, already drawn up, calls for a referendum in November, 1950.

Mayor John C. Post, of Takoma Park, recently elected president of the league, and Dr. Joseph M. Ray, head of the University of Maryland Political Science Department, and league executive secretary, are sparking the movement.

Also here last night were Mayors G. La Mar Kelly, of Rockville, and Floyd M. Mathias of Mount Rainier.

Post said the organization will seek introduction of a bill to make available to incorporated communities 10 per cent of State sales tax receipts and another bill to require State and county agencies to clear first with incorporated community heads before all permits are issued.

The most important provision of the "home rule" bill, it was explained, would allow incorporated communities to by-pass the General Assembly on amendments to charters. At present, myriad bills affecting incorporated communities must go through the legislative mill here.

Post said 37 members of the League of Municipalities are 100 per cent behind the idea.

Bill to Give Judges More Power Killed

Annapolis, Jan. 25 (P).—The House of Delegates decreed today that Maryland shall remain one of the two States which allow judges to make their own decisions on the law as well as the facts in criminal trials.

A bill to place in hands of judges all instructions on points of law was killed by an 82-21 vote after the first prolonged House debate of the 1949 session.

The action took the form of a rejection, of the favorable report on the bill by the judiciary committee. More than 20 delegates took the floor to tell what they thought of the measure.

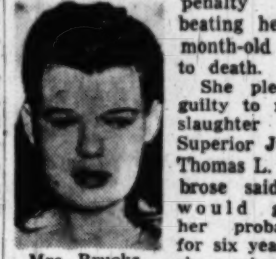

Delegate Boone (D., Baltimore County) made the motion to reject the favorable report.

Virginia Transit Union Rejects Wage Offer

Richmond, Va., Jan. 25 (P).—Hopes for averting a transit strike in Richmond, Norfolk and Portsmouth grew slimmer tonight as union operators voted to reject the Virginia Transit Co.'s latest wage offer.

A telephone vote for rejection in Richmond made the final count in the three cities 451 to reject the offer, 210 to accept it.

The vote, as announced by union representatives:

In Richmond, 295 to reject, four to accept.

In Norfolk, 140 to reject, 123 to accept.

In Portsmouth, 83 to accept, 10 to reject.

The operators have set February 3 for a strike in the three cities unless an agreement is reached prior to that time.

The offer rejected today would have given the operators an immediate 3½-cent wage hike, and an additional 4-cent hourly boost on May 1 should the V.T.C. succeed in obtaining fare increases in Richmond and Norfolk.

cents to 6½ cents per $100. Receipts are set aside to retire the debt.

Lowest Real Estate Tax

"This will be the lowest real estate tax in the history of the State," Lane said, "and the rate will be held to this figure if capital expenditures are made from the surplus."

Should the rate be fixed at 10 cents per $100, the Governor said in a news conference, enough money could be raised to increase the capital improvements fund to $6 million dollars, including the surplus.

Of mental hospitals, Lane said he wanted to wait for reports of surveys now in progress. He proposed the two houses name a joint committee to "receive with me and explore" the forthcoming reports and data on the mental institutions.

He upped the allowance for hospitals and Board of Mental Hygiene activities by $748,703. For hospital operations alone, he proposed a total of $8,903,914 and noted that this is more than twice the amount allotted in 1946.

The 1950 increase would pay for additional psychiatric directors and higher costs of food and materials.

More School Money

The budget proposes an increase of $1,533,420 in public school funds to a total of $25,294,671. Even so, the incentive fund would be almost $150,000, to $1,337,324. This is the balance from which the State contributes to county school building needs.

A "substantial increase in the assessable basis in certain sections of the State" accounted for the decrease, Lane said. State aid goes down when county tax receipts go up.

He suggested raising the teachers' colleges allotment by $138,390. Welfare allowances remained about the same, $5,262,816, but may be boosted in the supplemental budget. Lane observed that he had not received the report on a commission that studied the welfare program when he made up the budget.

If revisions are "found advisable," he said, they may be made later.

Outline For Welfare

The commission had recommended a welfare outlay of some seven million dollars, including a flexible "cost-of-living" fund.

Prison budgets were maintained at their present level, although the Governor said he planned further study of a proposed new institution for defective delinquents, and of three separate reports on prison affairs.

Despite an anticipated drop in student fees, the University of Maryland's account rose $513,863, to $13,145,140.

Largest proportion of the increase was labeled for Maryland State College at Princess Anne, the university's College for Negroes on the Eastern Shore. Lane proposed jumping its funds $311,074 to a total of $429,768.

Lane Requests Increase In Maryland U. Funds

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 25—Governor Lane tonight recommended that State funds totaling $13,145,140—an increase of $513,863 over current figures—be made available to the University of Maryland for 1949-50.

Lane told the legislators that an appropriation of $5,708,585 should be made available from general funds. He estimated an additional $7,436,555 would come from earmarked special funds.

Included in the special funds, Lane declared, is approximately $1,132,000 to come from the Federal Government.

Largest increase over the current year in the various departments would go to the university's Negro branch at Princess Anne. For that institution, Lane recommended an increase of $311,074.

Elsewhere in his 312-page budget, Governor Lane recommended these appropriations for general hospitals in nearby counties:

Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, $25,407; Montgomery County General, Olney, $16,700; Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, $4,484; Prince Georges General, $25,000; Frederick County Emergency, $26,356; Frederick Memorial, $25,930; Emergency Hospital, Annapolis, $14,110; Calvert County Hospital, $8,120; St. Marys Hospital, St. Marys County, $8,220; and Physicians Memorial Hospital, La Plata, $7,500.

Hebert Praises University For Dismissing Reds

Representative Hebert (D., La.) brought applause from the House yesterday as he commended the University of Washington for "accepting the challenge to communism" by firing three professors.

The Louisiana voiced the hope that the House Un-American Activities Committee will launch a vigorous drive "to ferret out to what extent our boys and girls are being led down the road to communism by professors who are supposed to protect our American way of life."

The University of Washington last Saturday dismissed three professors accused of past or present membership in the Communist Party.

The National Association of Education said Dr. Ralph McDonald, secretary of its higher education department, will look into the firings during a trip to the West Coast within the next two weeks.

A broader probe was planned by the American Association of University Professors, which was asked to enter the case by one of the discharged teachers.

Dry Ice Issue Two Experts At Odds on Rain Making

New York, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—A spokesman for the United States Weather Bureau and a scientist for the General Electric Corp. got into a tiff today over whether man-made rain really could be accomplished by seeding clouds with dry ice.

The disagreement took place at a point meeting of the American Meteorological Society and the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

R. D. Coons of the Weather Bureau's physical research section was not enthusiastic about man-made rain. He described experiments at Wilmington, Ohio, and said they "suggested that artificial cloud-seeding techniques are of relatively little economic importance."

Dr. Irving Langmuir of GE's research laboratory disagreed. He said experiments held jointly with the military services resulted in a one-million-ton rainfall in New Mexico last October through use of 15 pounds of dry ice.

"The Weather Bureau had said that cloudiness but no rain would prevail," he remarked.

House Rushes Labor Action

mittie of five Democrats and three Republicans.

In line with the policy set by the Democratic leadership in the Senate, hearings will be limited in content as well as time. Planned are repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, restoration of the Wagner Act, and a few amendments to the latter, as recommended by President Truman.

There's strong sentiment among House Labor Committee Democrats to revise the Nation's labor code. This plan, vigorously urged by organized labor, would first restore the Wagner Act, and later—after lengthy study, discussion, and consideration—amend the Wagner Act.

Representative Kelley is an advocate of the "two-package" plan. "One-Package" Favored Nonetheless, the "one-package" approach—an omnibus law repealing the Taft-Hartley Act, reviving the Wagner Act, and adding the President's suggested reforms—is likely to prevail as it has in the Senate Labor Committee.

A group of the President's Capitol Hill advisers visited the White House yesterday and discussed labor legislation. Afterward, Speaker Sam Rayburn reiterated his belief that the "one-package" plan was the right approach.

House leaders hope that the hearings on the Taft-Hartley Act can be cleaned up by the February 10 target date the Senate Labor Committee has set.

Hearings in the House, it is believed, will begin immediately after the brief hearings on the bill to raise minimum wages to 75 cents an hour, which open Thursday.

Once the House leadership fixes policy, little difficulty is expected in rushing through repeal of the Taft-Hartley Law, passed by the GOP-dominated 80th Congress to replace the New Deal's Wagner Labor Relations Act.

In the Senate, however, the Republicans are hoping to save some of the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act through a coalition with conservative Southern Democrats. Just how the Administration will handle this problem is still to be seen, but there was a report yesterday that the leadership might seek to maintain party discipline on the controversial issue through a caucus.

Senate hearings will begin Friday with Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin as first witness.

Meanwhile, Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman of the House Labor Committee, was having trouble organizing his committee staff. Some members of the committee have rebelled against Lesinski's proposal to place some nine residents of Michigan on the staff. One of the nine is Frank Hook, former Democratic Representative, who would serve as committee counsel. This dispute will be thrashed out today at an executive session of the committee.

ducers to fill 1949 goals for 34 of the 68 items on the critical list. Progress on the remaining half ranges from 50 to 99 per cent for 14 items, and from 8 to 48 per cent for the remainder.

Nearly a half of the purchases since the beginning of the program in July, 1946, have been made in the past six months. Monthly purchases have grown from $6,100,000 then to 67 million dollars now.

Data on supplies on hand and tonnages needed are classified as secret by the Government. Last year, however, the board reported that it planned to buy 30,000 tons of copper, 16,000 tons of lead, 18,000 tons of zinc and lesser quantities of other materials. Only foodstuffs mentioned was an order for one million pounds of pepper.

Difficulties Reported While some difficulties have been reported in getting industry to set aside materials for stockpiling, Carpenter yesterday praised the cooperation of copper, lead and zinc today in the Mayflower Hotel.

primary producers in carrying out the program. He declared that the voluntary method of allocating these metals has proved so successful that it will be followed in buying other materials for the pile.

The Munitions Board chairman said that already 23 million dollars worth of rubber, industrial diamonds, sisal and other materials has been delivered or promised by Marshall Plan countries for the American stockpile. Negotiations for other materials both from Marshall Plan nations and other countries are under way, it was said.

"Indications now are that imports of manganese, copper, lead, zinc, chrome, rubber and some other materials will be considerably increased," he added.

DP Aid Left To Churches, Osborn Says

The speed with which displaced persons can be resettled in America depends largely on the efforts of volunteer church groups, Dr. Charles R. Osborn, DP field representative of the Federal Council of Churches, said yesterday.

The Government has turned over responsibility for securing jobs, housing, inland transportation and sponsorship for DPs to church groups, he told 30 representatives of local Protestant denominations.

The conference of Protestant churches to discuss the city's responsibility for DPs was held under the auspices of the Washington Federation of Churches, in its headquarters at 1751 N. St. N.

Pointing out the effective resettlement work accomplished by highly organized Jewish and Catholic agencies, Dr. Osborn urged the group to set up a permanent committee for DP work, representing all denominations. The DP committee should include representatives of social agencies, the public school system, the International Institute, employment agencies and District housing authorities, he suggested.

Osborn criticized present DP legislation, which he said favored Protestants over Catholics and Jews, as "a disgrace to our country."

Postlude Philadelphia Orchestra in 3 Offerings

By Paul Hume

The Philadelphia Orchestra was directed by Alexander Hilberg last night in its briefest Constitution Hall concert in history.

Hilberg, generally in the seat of the concertmaster, scheduled a Mozart overture (Don Giovanni), a symphony, the second by Samuel Barber, and a violin concerto by Tchaikovsky. Nathan Milstein was soloist.

Philadelphia concerts under Hilberg have become habitual in the past couple of years. The violinist-conductor has a fluent technique about him, even in highly complex matters such as the Barber symphony.

This score, originally a tribute to the U. S. Air Force, has been slightly revised by its composer, and is now intended to be heard without programmatic references. We do not think, nor did last night's hearing convince us, that slight revisions can efface such obvious references as the percussive moments of the final movement, nor the jagged rhythms of the first and last.

Jagged rhythms are, heaven knows, much in vogue in our contemporary music. Still there did seem a peculiarly apposite quality in much of last night's symphony when viewed as a work inspired by events of the recent war. And why not? That is a perfectly legitimate background from which to create a work of art. Gernica and many other paintings have done as much in visual art.

The symphony persuades one of its composer's knowledge, and his conviction as to form and sound. But the total effect emphasizes the fact that Barber is essentially a stylist striving to write in a style which he believes to be acceptable, rather than a style completely at one with his own instincts. The resulting conflict gives us both beauty and uncertainty. Future writing may bring him nearer a resolution of his dilemma.

Milstein gave a sensuous account of the Russian concerto. More than to any other violinist appearing before us today, the Tchaikovsky seems to belong to him. It is a part of him as he makes his melodies—no problem to him as he tosses off his darts with hair-trigger accuracy—and a matter of personal affection as he makes his violin whisper in the slow movement. We have never heard the first movement cadenza played with such virtuosity. Hilberg's accompaniment was a model, except for those moments in the second movement when the support was too loud for the velvet magic of the solo instrument.

Ambassador Bruce's Resignation Refused

Buenos Aires, Jan. 25 (P).—United States Ambassador James Bruce says he will fly to Washington in two weeks for high-level talks.

Bruce said he submitted his resignation, according to form, when President Truman took office last week, but it was not accepted.

He said his continuance as Ambassador depends on what develops when he talks with the President, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and other State Department officials.

February 1 Proclaimed National Freedom Day

President Truman yesterday proclaimed February 1, 1949, and each succeeding February 1 as "National Freedom Day." It will commemorate the signing of the resolution of February 1, 1865, proposing the anti-slavery amendment to the Constitution.

Congress voted last June 30 to authorize the annual observance. The proclamation calls on the people to pause on February 1 "in solemn contemplation of the glorious beasings of freedom which we humbly and thankfully enjoy."

Dr. Peter Marshall, Chaplain Of Senate, Dies of Seizure

may know where to stand and what to stand for—because unless we stand for something, we shall fall for anything."

Dr. Marshall's selection as Senate chaplain two years ago was marked by charges of "partisan politics."

Republicans had come into control of the Senate. The minority Democrats wanted to retain as chaplain a Methodist minister, the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, who had served since 1942.

Switch Criticized

Democrats labeled the switch "strictly a political move," but made plain they were not criticizing Dr. Marshall.

Republicans denied that and elected Dr. Marshall. Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) explained they thought "no mistake would be made" if they sought as chaplain the pastor of the church where Abraham Lincoln once prayed.

Three weeks ago, Dr. Marshall was again named chaplain, even though the Democrats were in the majority this time.

Once asked if he was a Republican or Democrat, Dr. Marshall replied:

"Neither. I'm a native of Scotland and as I was naturalized after I became a resident of the District of Columbia in 1937, I've always been denied the right of vote."

A Higher Mandate

When the reshuffled Senate met January 3 for the first time, he prayed:

"Oh Lord, our God, look with favor upon the members of the Senate and bless each of them according to his needs. May they be aware of a mandate higher than that of the ballot box, a mandate from Thee, to legislate wisely and well."

The Senate was not in session yesterday, but when informed of Dr. Marshall's death, Vice President Barkley, it presiding officer, said:

"I'm shocked and grieved to hear of Dr. Marshall's death. He was not only a very delightful man personally, but he was an outstanding minister."

Dr. Marshall was to have spoken last night at a dinner of the St. Andrew's Society of Washington. He was president of the society for four years.

Born in Coatbridge, Scotland, an industrial town near Glasgow, he worked in steel mills after getting a mechanical engineering degree.

Dug Ditches as Youth

In 1927, when he was 25, he came to the United States. He dug ditches in New Jersey, worked in a foundry in Birmingham, Ala., and in the circulation department of the Birmingham News before entering the Columbia Theological Seminary at Decatur, Ga.

After graduating in 1931, he filled Georgia pastorates in Covington and Atlanta before coming here to New York Avenue Presbyterian Church late in 1937.

When he arrived in Washington, Dr. Marshall told an interviewer: "A man, I say, can love the Lord and not be a sissy."

Washington's leading members of the clergy were shocked by news of Dr. Marshall's death. Among them were four pastors who lunched every Friday with Dr. Marshall.

Enlisted by Colleagues

They are Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden of First Baptist Church, Dr. Clarence W. Cranford of Calvary Baptist Church, Dr. John W. Rustin of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church and Dr. Carl Kopf of the First Congregational Church.

"He was one of the most capable and useful men in the ministry," said Dr. Pruden.

Said Dr. Rustin: "The country has lost one of its greatest preachers and finest Christian ministers."

"I know no minister," said Dr. Cranford, "who I felt was making a greater impact for good on Washington than he."

"Dr. Marshall's modesty was a refreshing fact," said Dr. Kopf.

Charity Events Tax May End In Alexandria

Alexandria City Council last night indicated it will exempt religious, civic and veterans' organizations from paying license taxes on events held for charitable or benevolent purposes.

Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim said the council was "creating ill will" by taking a portion of the proceeds from dances, fairs, sales, etc.

The council directed the city's attorney to prepare amendments to the license tax ordinance for a vote at the next meeting.

The council passed on the first of two readings an appropriation of $638,900 for a new Negro high school, $195,957 for an addition to George Mason School, and $111,000 for equipment at four new schools. Final vote on the appropriation must wait at least three days. The funds come from a bond issue.

"His death is a serious loss to our community," said Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of Universalist National Memorial Church.

"Great Leader"

J. Austin Latimer, president of the Elders' Association of the Washington City Presbytery, said: "I join with all Washingtonians and others throughout the Nation in regret for the passing away of one of the most striking and distinguished figures in the religious life of the Nation's Capital."

"The Presbyterian Church and the Nation," said Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, minister of National Presbyterian Church, "have lost one of their great spiritual leaders."

Police Board Asked To Act for Firemen

The District Commissioners yesterday asked members and alternates of the Special Police Department Trial Board to act in the same capacity on the Special Fire Department Trial Board created last week.

Dr. Marshall is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Catherine Marshall, and their 9-year-old son, Peter, and his mother, sister and stepfather, all of whom live in Scotland.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Thursday at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Other details will be announced later.

The church announced that Mrs. Marshall, "knowing her husband's oft-repeated sentiments concerning funerals and his deep desire for simplicity, has expressed the wish that those who care to send flowers for his funeral might instead, if they feel so moved, make contributions to the church for a special fund for the education of candidates for the Gospel ministry."

The Columbia Historical Society, of which Dr. Marshall was a member, last night named a special committee of 22 to attend the funeral.

Newspaper Guild Assails Detroit Affidavit Ruling

Detroit, Jan. 25 (P).—The Newspaper Guild of Detroit (CIO) "censures the action and policy" of Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy in requiring non-Communist affidavits of newspapermen.

The Detroit Guild, a local of the American Newspaper Guild, denounced Toy's order in a resolution adopted by a general membership meeting last night.

Last week the police commissioner announced that newspaper reporters and photographers would be required to sign the affidavits before receiving police press cards. Toy said he was acting in the interest of national defense.

Two of Detroit's big daily papers, the News and Times, have made no objection to Toy's order. However, Basil L. Walters, executive editor of the Free Press, said that paper would issue its own identification cards to its newsmen and would go to court if Toy attempted to restrict their freedom.

The Army readied three bulldozers at Omaha after Gov. Val Peterson reported State funds were exhausted, and that the situation was "out of hand."

A thick blanket of snow that trapped more than 100,000 range cattle and more than a million sheep extended from western California to the Dakotas.

With winter continuing its January rampage, temperatures skidded to more than 40 below zero in parts of Wyoming and Montana. Carlin, Nev., claimed an unofficial minus 57 as the coldest spot in the Nation.

In southern Illinois, the flooding Wabash and Little Wabash Rivers drove additional hundreds of residents from their homes. Rain has fallen in the area almost continuously since Saturday.

Snow fell in Texas, but elsewhere in the Gulf States temperatures were above normal. Slightly above normal readings also prevailed along the South Atlantic Seaboard north to Washington.

The Air Force continued its "feedlift" operations in the snow-covered Nevada-livestock ranges, hauling feed in their big "Flying Boxcars." Most of the hay was landed at the Ely (Nev.) airport and trucked to ranches. However,

Flagstaff's Snow Blanket Only 67 Inches Deep Now

Flagstaff, Ariz., a few miles south of the Grand Canyon, has had 100.4 inches of snow during January—but it wasn't too bad the first three weeks.

Since Sunday morning, the Associated Press reported, 33.7 inches has fallen. A 67-inch fall remains on the ground.

The fliers also "bombed" cattle ranges inaccessible by truck.

In nearby Utah, a similar feedlift was operated by two C-47 transports of the Utah National Guard. Hay and cottonseed oil concentrate were being dropped directly to the starving livestock.

Peter Marshall

We deplore, as the Capital must, the untimely death of Dr. Peter Marshall, the 46-year-old chaplain of the Senate who was also pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Till Dr. Marshall came to the Senate two years ago, the Senators had heard a more or less perfunctory sort of "grace" before they began their deliberations. The Presbyterian minister opened the ears of the bowed Senators to his words of prayer, and he put those words alongside their subsequent speeches. They were novel out of the mouth of a minister, pointed in their application to the business in hand, and charged with a hortatory spirit that carried conviction. His voice had a vibrancy, his words a Scots tang, his presence a manliness, that enabled his allocation to linger in the senatorial memory. Only recently an American citizen, having been born in Scotland, he had a passion for America. His zest for life was as fresh and as real as his religion. He inspired the younger generation with sermons that, while without profundity, brought a living God into their lives. His is a loss that the Senate will not easily repair and that his growing congregation can ill spare.

Rip Van Winkle Rule

The launching of the fight against filibusters in the Senate must be regarded as a historic occasion. Unlimited speech in any legislative hall belongs to the leisurely eighteenth and nineteenth centuries—to the age of Rip Van Winkle, as Senator Morse said on Monday. It is utterly out of place in the modern legislative hall where momentous issues crowd upon hard-pressed legislators in ever increasing numbers. In our opinion the Senate can persist in its talkfest tradition only at grave danger to its own security in the American system of Government. The proposal to permit the Senate to close debate on any motion or measure by majority vote is, of course, related to the civil-rights program. But that is incidental. So long as the present ineffective cloture rule stands, the Senate will be at the mercy of a minority on any issue, regardless of what its nature might be. The test of whether a bill shall pass becomes, as Senator Morse said in testifying before the Rules Committee, the "physical endurance" of the opposition. That is not democratic government. It is only one step removed from "settling things by combat." We doubt that there is any practice of Congress now in use that brings so much popular criticism down upon the heads of our legislators as the filibuster. It can no more be justified than any other type of minority dictatorship, and we should think it would not take the Senate of the United States long to see that point.

Senatorial Magic

Incantation and mumbo jumbo often play a part in the legislative process, but seldom has the call upon occult powers gone so far as it did in the resolution approved by the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare on Monday. The committee undertook to make the Taft-Hartley Act disappear from the statute books by waving a paper resolution at it. The author of the resolution, Florida's Mr. Pepper, appears to have been deceived by his own magic. "We regard," he told newspapermen at the conclusion of the committee's amusing performance, "that we got rid of the Taft-Hartley Act this afternoon."

The obvious purpose of the resolution is to make a favorable impression on organized labor. Labor is demanding immediate repeal of the T-H Act and restoration of the Wagner Act on the assumption that it would later be amended in accord with the President's wishes. In effect, the committee has admitted the impracticability of that course by scheduling hearings on a single new labor bill. In the face of this action, its pretense of having reverted to the status quo ante 1947 is merely farcical byplay. If anyone on the committee assumes that labor will be misled by these antics, he places a low appraisal on the intelligence of union leaders.

We think the committee is complicating rather than simplifying its problem by this sort of political maneuvering. It may forget that the Taft-Hartley Act exists, but the Senate itself will never be allowed to forget it when the committee's handiwork comes up for debate and approval on the floor. An ostrich attitude in the committee is almost certain to encourage far-reaching amendments later, probably to the detriment of unions and employers alike. There is no substitute for sound legislation worked out in committee in the light of conditions as they currently exist.

Point IV

The first reaction abroad to the President's reference to the need for cooperative development of backward areas has a gimme sound. So lavish has the United States been with its largesse that it was hoped that the President had heralded another Operation Rathole. But nothing of the sort can be inferred from the President's words. "We must embark," said Mr. Truman, "on a bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of underdeveloped areas." Mr. Roosevelt on his visit to the Middle East—where a river conservancy scheme holds the possibility of pacifying as well as reconstructing a whole region—had the same aspiration. In America and other industrial countries, but particularly here, there is a plenitude of technological know-how, though the "material resources that we can afford to use for the assistance of other countries are limited."

The President invited the know-how countries to pool their resources in the realization of a world development program. If his idea is to be clothed in reality, the first step is to fix upon a mechanism. Since the President wants to work through the United Nations and its specialized agencies, he virtually names the appropriate agency, which is the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. Here is the agency with, as it were, the master know-how. Already it is operating in the field of world development, getting its funds from world investors, so that the projects it finances have to meet the fundamental test of "bankability." In other words, they must give evidence of self-liquidation. Without injury to its statutes the World Bank could easily put on the attributes of a development corporation. Here, then, is the mechanism. The first step in realizing the aim that the President expressed is to compile both a world registry of available engineering and managerial talent and a list of undertakings according to a priority system based on contribution to world revival, existing shortages and financial manageability.

However, all the mistakes of the twenties would be repeated if projects were financed on a lending basis. By such means American investors and bankers, forgetful of the old "capacity to pay" formula, sank several Latin American regimes in debt. The aim should rather be to encourage venture or risk capital—that is to say, participation in an enterprise by the capitalist jointly with local interests. A source of funds for this purpose is available in the counterpart funds which are accumulating in the ERP countries as withheld payments for Marshall Plan imports. Under law these funds may be used in building up new industrial capacity and in such undertakings as reclamation and irrigation schemes. They could be employed in the colonial areas which are still subject to their jurisdiction in joint projects to increase standards of living and to add to the supply of fats and raw materials in western Europe. Aside from this pool, there is a lot of spare private capital, particularly in the United States, which is looking for investment opportunities. Already the Rockefeller interests, for example, are reported to be devoting capital to development in South America in enterprises containing a provision enabling them to revert in toto to the local participants. Mobilization of maximum capital would be facilitated by the establishment of a capital issues board having power to control all flotations.

The President spoke about "guarantees to the investor" which "must be balanced by guarantees" to the country receiving investor help. This has provoked a particular misunderstanding. What kind of guarantees? Surely not a guaranty against loss, for that would have nothing to do with "venture" or "risk" capital, and, besides, would involve a host of complications that no government could legitimately face. Guarantees could properly be afforded in respect of transfer of interest payments into the investors' currency. They are also essential against confiscation, and this brings up a point we have always advocated in particular relation to Latin America, viz, a code of fair practices for both the capital exporter and the capital importer. If the President's idea is soundly worked out with the "vision and courage" that Senator Vandenberg bespoke in behalf of the Marshall Plan, the world might look forward to a cycle of achievement which would bring East and West and North and South together and enable mankind to acknowledge a common destiny and march down the years in peace and prosperity.

Fruit Of No Policy

Were it not for the serious background, the tit-for-tat fracas between Chile and Venezuela would belong to the score of a comic opera. Venezuela has withdrawn her ambassador from Santiago in an exchange of recriminations, and Chile reportedly is getting ready to call her representative home from Caracas. As a matter of fact, however, neither ambassador had official status. Inasmuch as Chile has not recognized the military junta which overthrew the legal government of Venezuela last November, relations could be conducted only on an informal basis.

The immediate cause of this rupture has been Chile's attitude toward the new Venezuelan regime. She has viewed the government headed by Lieut. Col. Carlos Delgado Chalbaud with an unfriendly eye, possibly because of its spiritual link with the army dictatorship that now rules Chile's northern neighbor, Peru. Chile held out against recognition of the Delgado regime and sought to persuade the United States to do likewise. In addition, she cited Venezuela before the Organization of American States for not allowing former President Romulo Betancourt to leave the country. This was in keeping with Chile's traditional insistence on the right of asylum, though it appeared somewhat gratuitous since Chile was not involved directly. In any event, whether or not the Venezuelan authorities were egged on by the Chilean protest, Betancourt left for Colombia before the case could be heard.

Beyond the local issues, the dispute is indicative of the basic disharmony, on recognition of new regimes that afflicts much of Latin America. Here the United States has complicated matters by its precipitate recognition of the new Venezuelan government against the wishes of a number of the Latin nations. Despite the assurances that recognition does not imply approval, in fact it gives increased status to the Delgado regime—a regime which, incidentally, is energetically mending fences even to the extent of looking for public relations men in the United States. The extension of this quasi-sanction to Venezuela will seem to negate the concern over Latin militarism expressed in the recent American note to Latin nations. As a practical matter it will cut the ground out from under those countries which have opposed the Delgado junta, for once the United States has acted it is difficult for its smaller neighbors to stand on principle.

What all the confusion over recognition illustrates beyond question is the paramount need for a new conference of hemisphere Foreign Ministers to evolve a collective policy respecting regimes of force and the whole question of nonintervention. The United States, which itself has contributed to the confusion, could undo some of the damage by taking the lead in calling for such a consultation.

Alpha And Omega

In going to Canton the Kuomintang bureaucracy is returning to the place where it got its foothold. Here Sun Yat-sen, creator of the party, challenged the Manchu dynasty in its capital in Peking, aided with funds subscribed by overseas Chinese. Dr. Sun had a sense of the apostolic with which he gathered a following that fanned out from his native Province of Canton. He had spells of successful agitation, and then relapsed into the kind of "masterly inactivity" abroad ascribed to Mazzini. It was during one of these absences from the limelight that the revolution of 1911 broke out in his name and unseated the 300-year-old Manchu dynasty. What really happened was that the Dragon Throne disintegrated. It had become thoroughly worm-eaten, and, but for repeated foreign interventions would have long before faded into history.

Perhaps this lack of need for effort and "struggle" accounted for the feeble and flickering life of the Chinese Republic that succeeded the Manchu monarchy. In 1911, Dr. Sun hurried back to China, but his conspiratorial life had unfitted him for the responsibilities of office. He lasted as provisional President only long enough to let in the first of a long line of warlords who, in the Chinese expression, simply "ate" the government. Foreign governments each had its favorite, and those favorites all had their day, after which they ceased from troubling the Chinese people. In 1923, Sun Yat-sen died in Peking, where he was making his peace with the prevailing warlord, and became a secular god in China. Two years later the man to whom he left his mantle, Chiang Kai-shek, started a revolt against warlord China, though not without Soviet help. The breeding ground again was Canton. This revolution seemed to be the real thing, though in due course the familiar deterioration appeared. This has been attested by the lack of fight of the armies of Chiang Kai-shek. From Tientsin, for instance: "As soon as the besiegers began their artillery bombardment, the forces of General Chen Chang-chieh, the garrison commander, found effective resistance impossible because his forces melted away." Why should Chiang Kai-shek have found his leadership subject, as his predecessors had, to a law of rapidly diminishing returns? The answer has nothing to do with Yalta, with how much or how little American aid he has had, or with anything but the inner corrosion of his own regime.

Chiang himself had forgotten the precepts of his own New Life Movement—a regulated attitude, right conduct, clear discrimination, and real self-consciousness. These make up the virtues that the Chinese people insist must inform rulership. For three quarters of a century the Chinese people have been without it, and the struggles of today are a continuation as well as a transformation of a long historical travail that began when Marx was in short pants. It is a travail that at the root springs from the impact of Western institutions upon Traditional China. China may or may not be putting on a new skin, but what is certain is that it is an old discarded skin that will wind up in Canton.

PRAISE

Now praise these things unalloyable:

The stubborn undissolving stone whereon not even grass has grown,

The proud black panther hunting high
While hunger keeps him company,

The sleek undeviating rain
Headless of wind that shakes the pane,

A dried leaf's closed, mysterious heart
That turns to dust ere it pulls apart,

And most, that look in honest eyes
Of quiet, unexpected scorn
From one who could have lived, forewarned,
But silent, dies.

"It's The Same Thing Without Mechanical Problems"

Letters To The Editor

Correction

In our editorial "Fair Deal For D. C." published on January 24 we referred to the present District income-tax law as "exempting Government employees." That statement is too sweeping. Actually this income-tax law exempts the salaries or wages of Federal employees who are domiciled outside the District and income derived by such employees from sources outside the District. The trouble is, of course, that many Government employees who live in the District claim to be domiciled elsewhere, and the courts have always upheld those claims.

Peace Offensive

There are indications that the Soviets want a consolidation of things. How should the United States react upon what is called the Russian peace offensive? I think our answer should be the same whether we believe in the sincerity of these utterances or not. In both cases we should indicate that we are prepared for a definite settlement of the cold war.

We should even do more. We should present to the Soviets and the world at large a concrete outline of an American plan for peace, complete with safeguards and with the prospect of economic cooperation through loans and the Soviets should be invited to reveal their own ideas on the peace to come. If they are sincere, there will be a chance to come to terms with them, whereas piecemeal negotiations on Berlin or any other special subject never will succeed. If, on the other hand, the Russian peace offensive is meant only for propaganda purposes, a constructive American answer will put the Soviets to a disadvantage.

"The Inaugural Tag"

The Los Angeles Times reports, and editorially approves, your editorial of January 4 to advance the inauguration day of the President to coincide with the January 3 induction of new members of Congress.

Since I can remember, the State of the Union message of the President has seemed to be an account of stewardship by the Executive to the lawmakers, when they return to the Capital, from the adjournment. In election years, this message has the special purpose of informing the new members of Congress, what state their Nation is in (as seen by the man who has managed its affairs for four years).

Many a man feels lost on arrival in Washington, and in recent years the lot of the members of Congress has been pretty much that of others who must visit the Nation's Capital City. The freshman has little understanding of the ways of Congress, and the magnitude of problems he must help settle from the outset. To get his sights set straight, he needs to get "laid-out" first. His first job is to get an over-all, authentic picture of the national problems, so as to chart his course. The bureaucratic "dope," even if available, must appear as of doubtful variety, without the responsible confirmation which the head of the Administration automatically furnishes in his message. Also, the message compresses material which it would probably take weeks to collect, and collate.

With January 3 as inaugural of the new President, the Congress (and the Nation) would be too anxious to hear him, to pay much attention to the words of the former President. And, yet, in a way, these latter are far more weighty and vital to law-maker and citizen alike than the views of the new President. The time from January 3 to Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

January 20 gives all serious-minded men in the National Legislature a chance to get posted and get set to tackle the budget and other messages. The new President also needs time to get adequately informed on the actual situation facing him, with enough details learned from men whom he now heads, to be able to chart his future course, and tell the Congress what he wants done. And the State of the Union message of the outgoing President furnishes the newcomer to the chief post as good and enlightening a start as it does to the rest.

Inaugural On Television

I saw the Inauguration on television—and it was a sad spectacle. I am rather certain that it decided quite a few people, besides myself, against spending money on a set for some time to come.

It was a rare picture that was not "fuzzy," "foggy" or whatever other excuses may be made for a very simple, basic defect: out of focus. Apparently the camera people on these cameras along the route had less knowledge of the workings of a lens than the average amateur photographer.

Perhaps the time will come when it will be understood, that outside of knowing the limitations and peculiarities of this medium, a television cameraman should know basic photographic principles in preference to knowing the exact electronic process by which his pictures are being transmitted.

As another criticism, leveled at the producer of this telecast, let me yet mention that there was a marked lack of continuity in the show, some floats being shown each time they passed one of the four camera locations, others being omitted completely.

Symphony Merger

In marked contrast to the decision of Chicago and New York to combine forces for the production of opera was the action of officials here of the National Symphony Orchestra Association in quickly rejecting the proposal of the Baltimore Sun that the two symphonies pool their resources.

The Baltimore proposal, when seconded in these columns recently by "Orpheus," drew a reply from an official of the sustaining fund campaign which amounted almost to a charge of lesser majesty.

I submitted both letters (dated January 2 and 7) to the editor of the Baltimore Sun, Mr. Philip M. Wagner, for an analysis. His reply, in part, was as follows: "There exists in Baltimore an undercurrent of sympathy for the idea of an orchestra merger." However, as in Washington, there is a tendency on the part of those actually responsible for the welfare of the orchestra to place emphasis on the difficulties which a merger would involve. "Some of the objections of Mr. Emerson Meyer (see The Washington Post January 7) seem to me irrelevant—the question of union jurisdiction, rehearsal places, and so forth. I believe that the personnel of both orchestras at present includes citi-

France And Germany

"If De Gaulle is impractical, yet represents the passionate convictions of the majority of Frenchmen, what then is the answer?"—Joseph Alsop in The Washington Post of January 22.

The answer is this: For the past hundred years or so it has been the passionate conviction of this same majority of Frenchmen, expressed through a score or more of spokesmen, some practical in our eyes, some impractical, that Germans are and dogs that, once caged, they should be kept caged, and that turned loose they will bite us all again. France first.

It has been the passionate conviction of many British, American, et al., that the German is a fine fellow, a chubby, mellow beer drinker, who is more interested in Wagner's music than in the sound of cannon; that unless we give him back the Ruhr and his own economy and political life none of us can be happy. The German has simply made a false step and followed false prophets, etc., etc. If we give Germany back to the German people everything will be all right and nobody will ever get bitten again.

In every case over this hundred years or so our ideas have prevailed and the Frenchmen's predictions have come true. This war, regardless of the impracticality of the spokesmen, but simply on the basis of having been wrong every time for a whole century, why don't we try it the Frenchman's way?

"Vandenberg's Point"

The editorial in your January 20 issue entitled "Vandenberg's Point" is like a drink of cool water on a thirsty day, but I caution you that the National Association of Manufacturers or the United States Chamber of Commerce will catch you if you don't watch out. To question the high and exclusive competency of a businessman for any job, from that of public administration to the ministry, is even to the practice of medicine, will be regarded by some as rank heresy for which you ought to be burned at the stake with your own advertising pages.

Orchids And Politics

By Malvina Lindsay

Corsage Defense

A LAST-DITCH fight to save the orchid corsage from being thrown out of the revitalized Republican Party was announced today by Mrs. Sylvester Mastodon.

I interviewed Mrs. Mastodon between planes as she was rushing to Omaha with her husband, the president of the Status Quo Protective League, for the meeting of the Republican National Committee. Two giant purple orchids adorned her natural ranch mink cape.

"I flew here from Florida," said Mrs. Mastodon, "immediately on hearing that a leading Republican Senator was urging that in future no Republican women be photographed wearing orchids. This is just another example of Communists boring from within."

"But I understand," I ventured, "that this Senator thought the orchid photographs cost votes."

"Nonsense! This is a free country—as yet. Anyone can have an orchid if he has the price."

"The trouble with this country," put in Mr. Mastodon, "is that everybody wants to wear an orchid."

"BESIDES," went on Mrs. Mastodon, "look at the Democrats' corsages. Consider how their leading wives were decked out in inaugural week. I understand they did go in more for gardenias—I heard of a lot of second-day ones—but there were corsages everywhere."

"What is your plan of campaign, Mrs. Mastodon?"

"I shall inform the Republican leaders that if they expect to get the nicer element of women."

"She means the sounder-thinking ladies," explained Mr. Mastodon.

"That if they want the better element of women to work in the party they must say nothing about orchids. Besides, it's just as logical to take 50-cent cigars away from men Republicans."

"You see," put in Mr. Mastodon, "most of the sounder men Republicans feel deeply on this subject, too. If we don't encourage our ladies to dress up and wear orchids and sit in boxes and pour tea they'll want—er, well the point is, we really have to do something—"

"You mean they'll want of-fices and committee posts?"

"No! No! Don't misquote me. I'm a firm believer in womanhood. I want to help ladies advance in politics as much as anybody. But er—well a lot of the ladies aren't—er—qualified for—well the bulk party of politics."

"That's just what I'm going to tell the head Republicans!" exclaimed Mrs. Mastodon. "If they don't want women sticking their noses into caucuses—"

"Wait now dear, interrupted Mr. Mastodon. "Don't get the wrong idea across. It's just a matter of pioneer individualism—well at least of individualism."

"BUT Mr. Mastodon," I protested, "the corsage cult is comparatively new. None of the old prints and photographs up to Coolidge show groups with corsages."

"Just the same it's a traditional symbol in politics," he declared. "You see a lady with an orchid you know where she stands. You can put your finger on her."

"But don't some Republican leaders think that the party needs more voters who can't afford orchids?"

"Anybody can afford an orchid if he works hard enough and watches his pennies." "That's the issue across. It's just the Republican Party," explained Mrs. Mastodon. "The whole corsage concept of public life is at stake. Hence I intend to line up some leading women Democrats, the DAR of course, all the hospitality committees of both men's and women's clubs, the florists, and possibly the silver fox fur men who are trying so desperately to make a comeback."

"But," I asked, "aren't some of the younger women's groups now trying to play down corsages because they regard them as symbolizing feminine ineffectuality in public affairs?"

"That's the reason we must work harder on our 'Conserve the Corsage' campaign. We must preserve gracious femininity in public life at all costs."

"But don't think we're the mossback type of Republican," cautioned Mr. Mastodon. "We're middle of the roaders. In fact we're not entirely opposed to change, that is, a little properly directed change."

"Yes, in fact," admitted Mrs. Mastodon "I'd be willing to compromise the whole orchid controversy. If the Republican Senator doesn't want women wearing orchids, I'm perfectly willing to settle for camellias."

Armed Forces Pay

It seems the President does not believe in extending the tax-free exemption of the Armed forces until they get a pay raise—but his sign is bill giving himself, the Vice President and the Speaker tax-free money.

He has stated he intends to back tax armed forces pay bill, but why reduce their meager pay until the increase is in effect? As we all know, it takes months for a bill to be tossed back and forth between the House and Senate, if it is ever passed. In the meanwhile the service pay is reduced.

Communists On Trial

THE TRIAL of the little group of men who have directed the Communist Party in the United States is being watched throughout the world. In a sense it is a test of the American judicial system as well as a trial of the Communist Party.

Childs

In recent years we have learned a great deal about the conspiratorial methods of communism in its operation in almost every country on the globe. Novelists, such as Arthur Koestler and others, have brilliantly dissected the Marxist mind with its awful, guilty complex.

The Canadian espionage inquiry gave a carefully documented picture, never before available, of techniques. It showed how disgruntled, disaffected citizens on the one hand and willful idealists on the other hand could be drawn so far into the Communist net that they found themselves becoming traitors and spies almost without being aware of it.

The pattern of training in Moscow for revolutionaries and saboteurs has been revealed. Graduates of every nationality pop up in their respective homelands prepared to help overthrow existing governments.

Were the 12 American Communists carrying on in this pattern, and can the Government prove it? That is the question the jury must decide.

THE COMMUNISTS are raising the issue of the right of free speech. The American Civil Liberties Union, which has no taint whatsoever of communism, defends the right of Communists to argue their beliefs.

With respect to the issue of free speech it seems to me important to make a distinction. Speech that is open and public, even including public speech advocating revolution, is within the framework of traditional American freedom.

But speech that is secret and conspiratorial does not come under the protection of the constitutional guarantees. Thus, two men planning to rob a bank could scarcely claim freedom of speech for a discussion of their plot.

Attorney General Tom Clark is confident that the Government's case against the Communist bosses will not cut across the guarantees that are at the heart of American freedom. The indictments were returned only after the most thorough and exhaustive investigation into the acts—as distinguished from the words—of the Communist Party in this country.

The Department of Justice has more at stake than the outcome of the trial. Mr. Clark has asked Congress for a drastic tightening of the present statutes covering espionage. The case now being presented in New York and its outcome may well determine how far Congress will go in granting further powers.

ONE OF the things Attorney General Clark is asking is that evidence obtained by wire tapping be allowed to be introduced as evidence in the Federal courts. There is great deal of confusion about the matter of wire tapping which Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes called a "dirty business."

Wire tapping is not now forbidden by law. A great deal more of it goes on than the average citizen realizes. While evidence obtained in this way cannot be used in a Federal court, the Federal Bureau of Investigation does a limited amount of wire tapping under the personal supervision of the Attorney General. On the average, about 10 taps are approved by Mr. Clark to be carried on simultaneously.

Under the proposal outlined by Attorney General Clark, wire tapping would be permitted only when in the interpretation of the Department of Justice the national security was involved. Evidence obtained under such a ruling from the Attorney General could be introduced in the Federal courts.

Under any other circumstances wire tapping by governmental or private agencies would be unlawful. Thus, if Mr. Clark's proposal is enacted into law, the present wholesale snooping by the wire-tap method would be ended. Presumably, in only a very few instances would an Attorney General approve this technique, since he would be directly responsible in the event of a backfire with public opinion rising up in protest at an abuse of what most Americans, at any rate, consider highly unpleasant business.

This will be one of the toughest decisions for Congress to take. A decision should be reached only after extensive hearings have reviewed the whole question of the right of free speech in connection with the threat of the Communist conspiracy. It will be no triumph over communism if in the effort to defeat the conspiracy the methods of our Government are degraded to a conspiratorial level.

County Services Shift Plan Protested; Changes Probable

Changes in the McNay plan for removal of suburban records and services to Rockville appeared probable yesterday after a hearing held by the Montgomery County Council.

The plan proposed by County Manager Irving McNay would close down services in the county buildings at Bethesda and Silver Spring and would transfer records and functions to Rockville, leaving a receptionist at each county building to receive complaints and make appointments with the county manager, who would be at each county building a half-day each week.

Einar Christensen, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, said that the proposals actually "will not save a dime," but even if the services cost twice as much, suburban residents who pay for them still would desire them.

Blair Lee, 3d, past president of the Board of Trade, said adoption of the McNay plan would make Silver Spring the "biggest city in the United States operated by remote control."

Mrs. J. Reed Bradley, representing the board of directors of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, said that group favored the removal plan, but Leslie Sanders, Bethesda publisher, charged the chamber represents only a portion of the people of that area and that only 14 persons were present at the chamber's board meeting. Sanders said sentiment in Bethesda is opposed to the change.

J. Noble Boaz, president of the county Real Estate Board; Herbert

E. Thompson, also of the real estate group; former County Commissioner Robert D. Hagner and Thomas G. Oyster, president of the Montgomery-Prince Georges Engineers Society, were among others opposing the change.

McNay said a change in his plan to permit retention of assessments and land records in the county buildings is under consideration, and council members indicated a possible change in the department transfer plan would be made to provide for a county-wide tree department.

Council members will make a further study of the proposal before any action is taken, Frederic P. Lee, president of the council, said.

In other actions, the council yesterday directed McNay to prepare plans for setting up the Department of Finance and Public Works provided for in the charter and to make recommendations for directors of these two departments.

Charles P. Taft Asks Repeal Of Trade Law

Charles P. Taft, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, urged Congress yesterday to repeal the cut-back reciprocal trade law that his brother, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) helped push through last year.

Taft, Cincinnati lawyer, asked a willing House Ways and Means Committee to extend the trade program until 1951, stripped of the restrictions imposed by the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress.

He told the committee "there is no adequate ground" for fears of some American producers that the tariff-cutting trade program will hurt their business. Also indicating the Administration's unrestricted two-year extension bill were former Undersecretary of State William L. Clayton, Stanley H. Rittenberg, director of the CIO Education and Research Department, and Morris P. Rosenthal, president of the National Council of American Importers.

Prince Georges Groups Ask County Government Survey

A recommendation that Prince Georges County government be surveyed to uncover weaknesses was presented to the county commissioners yesterday by representatives of seven county groups.

The projected analysis would be made as a public service by the University of Maryland, according to Mrs. Redden Bogdanoff, leader of the delegation, if the commissioner requested it.

Mrs. Bogdanoff, president of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters, told the commissioners the survey would "point to the specific areas of unmet needs."

Walter F. Mulligan, president of the Prince Georges Civic Federation, declared, "The county has grown like Topsy," adding he felt "it is time to modernize the county government." Joseph R. Blandford, representing county units of the grange, termed the present government a "patch-work."

Other groups represented were the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Homemakers, American Association of University Women, and the Landover Hills Women's Club.

The commissioners took the matter under advisement. In other actions yesterday, the commissioners turned down a request for $150,000 to cover erect-

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Why A Peace Offensive Now?

ROME.—In this topsy-turvy world, peace offensives rarely indicate a desire for peace. This is almost certainly the case at the moment when the voices of Palmiro Togliatti, Marcel Cachin and Henry Wallace have been raised in well-trained chorus to plead for settlement of the interminable squabbling between the Soviet and non-Soviet world.

The place to look for an explanation of this phenomenon is not in Moscow, where any change of a basic policy is immensely unlikely. The place to look, rather, is in the followers in Italy, France and the United States of Togliatti, Cachin and Wallace.

In fact, the real motive for the propaganda barrage seems to be the progressive decline of Communist appeal to the working masses in the West, plus, perhaps, the increasingly grave condition of the satellite states in eastern Europe. The inwardness of the situation is demonstrated by a series of curious facts about the Communist Party here in Italy.

Item 1: The attempted assassination of Togliatti last spring briefly gave full control of the Italian party to the activists, Secchia and Longo. Secchia at once tried to order an armed rising. He was frustrated by opposition within the Italian Politburo, but the rising actually took place prematurely in Genoa. Led by squads of their para-military organization, Genoa Communists briefly occupied such classical key points as the city power station. But when the police and carabinieri merely showed themselves the Communist braves melted away without a shot being fired.

Item 2: Even before the Italian elections, Togliatti had ordered checks of important Communist units, which showed supposed hither-enders only 20 per cent reliable in case of severe test. When Togliatti recovered from his wound the evidence was laid before the Moscow authorities, together with the result of Secchia's adventurism. Secchia was rebuked. Togliatti's gradualism was approved and his full authority over the Italian party was confirmed by Moscow.

Item 3: This meant, however, that the Italian Communists must carry on the guerrilla warfare against the Marshall Plan, mainly in the form of endless big and little political strikes, which is now the tactic of desperation of all western European Communists. The Communist chiefs of the party-dominated Italian Confederation of Labor, Di Vittorio, at once

The Gallup Poll

Voters Divide on GOP Need For New Leaders or Program

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion
Princeton, N. J., Jan. 25.—How can the Republican Party stage a comeback?

GOP leaders have aired their views on that subject since November. To find out what the rank and file of Republican voters want done and, even more important, what thoughts are in the minds of the Nation's independent voters without whose support the GOP cannot win in 1952, the Institute conducted a survey on the question:

"Which do you think the Republican Party needs more—new leaders or a new program?"

The vote was correlated with the replies to a second question asking, "In politics, as of today, do you consider yourself a Democrat, Republican, Progressive or Independent?"

The Republicans tend to believe that the party's main need is new leaders.

Among voters who consider themselves independents, however, there is a somewhat greater tendency to stress the need for a new program. The vote:

	Load.	Pro-	No.
	ers	gram	Both opin.
Republicans	43%	27%	10% 20%
Independents	31	35	13 21
Democrats	35	30	9 26
Totals	36	30	10 24

To shed further light on the views of independents, the Institute asked:

"What do you think the Republican Party will have to do better than now and in 1952 to win the presidential election?"

The results follow:

Gallup Tells D. C. Marketers Polls Remain Useful Tools

So long as public opinion is important, and until a better method of measuring it is found, public opinion polls will be continued, Dr. George Gallup told members of the American Marketing Association at a Washington chapter luncheon yesterday.

In spite of their deficiencies, such polls are the most useful tools of democracy ever devised, he stated.

Failure of polls to predict the Truman election did not destroy their usefulness in market research, Dr. Gallup said, pointing out that elections offer much more difficult research problems. Up to the 1948 election, 404 political predictions had been made in 12 nations by 20 organizations, with an average error of 3.9 per cent, he said. Even the Truman-Dewey predictions came within an all-party error of 4 percentage points and a major-party error of 4.5 points, he stated.

The public expected an accuracy far greater than pollsters themselves ever claimed, according to Gallup, who quoted an article of his own published in a national magazine in August in which he warned of poll accuracy limitations. However, Gallup said, in answer to a question from the audience, accuracy within 4 percentage points in commercial research would be considered "terrific."

An error in judgment rather than of technique was blamed by Gallup for the abnormal percentage error in the last election. A general feeling that campaign oratory does not influence votes led to the acceptance of mid-October figures as being final, he said, adding, "It was a major mistake not to take last minute polls."

Gallup predicted an accuracy of within 3 percentage points or perhaps some day as good as within 2 points, with continual improvement in research techniques, but he warned that elections would never be predictable with absolute certainty because of outside factors. He cited the Pope's last-minute appeal to French voters as an example, pointing out that it shot the MRP vote up to 6 percentage points more than any one had expected.

This Morning

With Shirley Poelch

AS AN OLD, unreconstructed Bowie fan, there will be no heart-bleeding here for the Havre de Grace people who went to the Maryland Racing Commission yesterday and tried to muscle in on Bowie's profitable racing dates. They were set upon.

It was quite a come-uppance for Havre de Grace. For years when Bowie was the stepchild of the Maryland tracks and forced to be content with the early April racing dates, with their risk of bad weather, the Graw people wouldn't give up a day of their own late spring dates. And the spectacle of Havre de Grace going to the commission with hat in hand to beg a share of Bowie's dates was some kind of retributive justice.

Naturally enough, Havre de Grace was coveting the first two weeks in April when Bowie runs virtually without competition from other tracks. The Graw, thrown into competition with the new tracks at Camden and Atlantic City which weaned away their Philadelphia patronage, suddenly recognized Bowie's dates as preferred ones.

The risks of snow and rains that Bowie was always compelled to take because it had little choice against the fancier tracks, Havre de Grace announced itself willing to hazard now. But it was no go, and the commission turned 'em down.

THE BOWIE TRACK and Bowie fans suffered for years under the worst kind of conditions. Only the adventurous horse players went to Bowie during the first decade of the track's existence that started in 1912. There were no automobile routes. You went by flat-cars or in the mangiest, sea-bitten rail coaches the old Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis could muster. Some of those rails eventually found their way to Japan as scrap, incidentally, and were tossed back at many a Bowie horse player from Jap mortars.

Those were the days of the three-card monte games in the coaches, which apparently were also the last outposts of the old shell-game manipulators. Many a Bowie fan was broke before he hit the track. And you were never a sure winner at the day's end until you stepped out of the coaches with your winnings intact. But law and order moved into the trains in the mid-20s.

Bowie was the paradise of the longshot players, in contrast to Havre de Grace, which used to boast that it led the country in highest percentage of winning favorites. In the early years of Bowie, when there was no Florida racing and untried horses were coming out of winter quarters in the spring, past performances were always wonderfully dubious and the mutual payoffs wonderful.

BOWIE FANS NEVER were quite bedazzled by the plush parlors of the more stylish tracks, where losing your two bucks was supposed to be some kind of a privilege. Bowie could look as beautiful as Saratoga, or Belmont, if you got a 14-to-1 shot home. The scrubby pine on the backstretch took on the magnificence of Hialeah's stately palms and bougainvillea when the official sign went up and your nag was it.

Bowie fans love to talk about Bowie. They like to preface their stories with "you won't believe this, but..." and most of what they tell you did happen if slightly implausible. Like the day it was snowing a small-sized blizzard and they cashed their big parlay on two horses named Eskimo and Snowflake, which won successive races.

And do you remember the horse named Kilbowie? Bowie fans do. They'll tell you that Kilbowie was killed at Bowie, and he was. Out in front when he bolted to the inside rail and ran a big silver of the fence through his side and was gutted, honest. Or the day that Friday the Thirteenth won on Friday the thirteenth and paid $13.

OH, BOWIE DIDN'T have many of the stylish horses, but Bowie fans loved their nags just the same, or most of 'em. Man-O-War never did get to run at Bowie, and Havre de Grace, Laurel and Pimlico had first call on the famous horses, but Bowie fans did get to see the good mare, Princess Doreen, and the consistent Joy Smoke and Paine of Wales. And that most democratic of all thoroughbreds, Exterminator, raced at Bowie, too.

The stable wouldn't send their top performers to Bowie for a long time. Harry Payne Whitney used to send his first string to New York under Trainer Jimmie Rowe, his ace, but sometimes he'd race his second-string 2-year-olds at Bowie. Young Freddie Hopkins had charge of that latter stable, and it was a Bowie horse that made him famous.

In the consignment of the Whitney second string to Bowie was a high-kicking little colt by Pennant. Hopkins was dissatisfied with the way the stable jockeys handled him. Couldn't hold him in. He picked out a strong-armed exercise boy named Sonny Workman and gave him the mount, and from that day you heard a lot of Workman, and Trainer Hopkins and the colt, which was Equipoise, of course. Got their start at Bowie.

Caps Promise They'll End Jinx at Baltimore Tonight

Baltimore, Jan. 25.—The hottest rivalry in the Basketball Association of America will be resumed here tomorrow night when the Washington Caps and Baltimore Bullets renew their feuding before a capacity house in the rickety old Coliseum.

A defeat wouldn't appreciably hurt Washington's 10-game bungle over the rest of the BAA's Eastern division, but if the Bullets win they will become the first club in the three-year history of the league to whip the Caps three consecutive times.

Coach Buddy Jeannette's Bullets, holding on to third place, have dumped the Caps by 20 points and then by 17 in their last two meetings to more than average Washington's two early season victories. The entire Cap cast, from Coach Red Auerbach on down, vows it won't happen again. Tonight's test is the first of a five-game road trip for Washington.

All 4000 of the Coliseum's seats have been sold for two weeks for tomorrow's rubber battle. The crowd will include about 1000 from Washington.

With one exception, the Caps will rely on their regular starters against the Bullets. Jack Nichols, who will become the first club in the three-year history of the league to whip the Caps three consecutive times.

Wilson, Colts, Chamberlain Win Games

By Herb Heft

The Interhigh Basketball League, cramped for space, and limited in playing dates, yesterday afternoon introduced the triple-header to its patrons at the National Guard Armory.

The three-game marathon attracted a transient crowd of 1298 school kids, most of whom saw

Wilson's 32-27 victory over Anacostia in the middle game was of most significance. It was the third straight for the unbeaten Green Tigers, and moved them into first place, a half-game in front of idle Eastern.

Chamberlain's 36-24 conquest of Bell was its first winning venture since these two schools were admitted to the league last month. The loss dropped Bell into a tie for the cellar with Roosevelt, which lost its third in a row, 43-36, to Coolidge.

Again, Wilson's great reserve strength asserted itself, and was responsible for the Tigers' victory. When Anacostia reduced a 12-2 first-quarter deficit to 24-21 early in the fourth quarter, Wilson Coach Hank Bristol yanked his tiring first team.

Into the fray came Romney Linney, Lynn Felt, Bucky Runnels, Pret Kavanaugh and Baker Smith, to hold the threatening Tribe at bay until the first quintet could catch its breath. With 3:10 left and Wilson still ahead, 30-26, the first team returned, and Don Scott promptly put in a layup to ice the game for the Tigers.

Speros Gets Eight
Leo Speros of the first unit notched eight points to pace Wilson. The game's pointmaking laurels went, however, to Ronnie Ryan and Ronnie Brooks, whose 10 points apiece all but overcame Wilson's long lead.

In the opener, Chamberlain catapulted into a 20-4 lead in the first nine minutes, only to see it slowly disintegrate. In a sudden, third period flurry, climaxed by two field goals apiece by Lew Shifflett and Frank Spicer, Bell reduced the deficit to 20-18. Chamberlain's Tom Blount again turned the trend in his team's direction with a field goal, and the Colts coasted home.

In the finale Coolidge showed its

Bowie Again Opens With Spring Meet

Baltimore, Jan. 25 (P).—Maryland's major tracks, in a dither over competition from New Jersey, had their scramble for 1949 dates straightened out today by the State Racing Commission.

In trying to avoid racing against Garden State in the spring, the Maryland tracks created a jam which they were unable to clear up among themselves.

The commission stepped in and

When They Race:

The 1949 dates for Maryland tracks:
BOWIE—March 28-April 9;
November 19-December 3.
HAYES DE GRACE—April 11-
May 4; November 14-17 at Pimlico.

PIMLICO—May 6-14; October
25-November 12.

LAUREL—September 24-
October 22.

fixed a schedule based on a proposal made by the Maryland Jockey Club. The upshot of it is that all but Laurel will have split meetings and have de Grace's windup will be at Pimlico which will have only an eight-day spring session.

The 100 days of Maryland racing will run from March 28 to December 3, Bowie opening and closing the season. It was between Bowie and Hayes de Grace that the rub developed.

Hayes de Grace, located closest to Garden State, wanted to get all its allotted 25 days in before Garden State opens on May 3. The two tracks operated simultaneously last year and the Maryland track came off second best at the mutuels.

"We cannot run against Garden State and survive," was the plea of Milton A. Reckord, Hayes de Grace president.

Bowie was equally adamant about retaining the spring dates it has had for 35 years. A shorter earlier opening of Hayes de Grace spring meeting for Bowie to allow would have extended the Bowie fall meeting into the dead of winter.

Harry A. Parr, 3d, then brought out the Maryland Jockey Club proposal which was adopted with only one minor change and put into effect by the commission. The Jockey club owns Laurel and Pimlico.

The new schedule permits Hayes de Grace to run 21 days in the spring, only the last two in competition with the Garden State. The remaining four days will be tacked on to the end of Pimlico's fall meeting.

The rearrangement cuts Pimlico's spring meeting from 12 days to 8, winding up with the Pre-sneak on May 14.

Laurel is the only track which will operate 25 straight days, excluding Sunday, in the fall.

The bugaboo of New Jersey competition was raised repeatedly at the meeting.

Reckord advocated a "complete restudy of dates every year because we are up against extensive New Jersey competition." He said that without agreement among the three tracks "no Maryland track will survive."

Chic Blonde Admits Forgery of Check

Smartly attired in a svelte black dress, honey-haired Mary Stuart Hayes, 25, calmly waived preliminary hearing and confessed her guilt on a forgery charge yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

She had been arrested in a chic red gabardine suit less than 24 hours before, when police received reports of a trail of bad checks left in fashionable Washington dress shops.

Miss Hayes, who gave her address as the Alban Towers Apartments, 2700 Massachusetts ave. n.w., said she was on probation for having passed worthless checks last year. She stood stiffly but with poise, and gazed out a window as the commissioner cited the new charge.

Forgery last August of a $76 check, to which she signed the name of Anne Payson, 1419 Wisconsin ave. n.w., proprietor of a Washington yarn shop.

Detective Sgt. George L. Saunders of the Police Check Squad said police have six other charges against the petite, attractive woman. They involve about $400 acquired under false pretenses, police said.

When Miss Hayes left the commissioner's office, accompanied by a marshal and a woman marshal, she went to the corner of his reception room and burst into tears. Bond was set at $1500. Miss Hayes said she was unemployed and could not make bond. She was held for the grand jury and for probation authorities of Municipal Court.

Miss Hayes was apprehended Monday afternoon in the 2600 block of Connecticut ave. n.w. The red suit she was wearing, reportedly bought with a "no account" $89.95 check January 17 at Peck &

Untrained GI Camp Medical Aide, He Says

Fort Meade, Md., Jan. 25 (AP).—A former soldier testified today he was assigned to treat American soldiers at an Army prison camp dispensary in Wurzburg, Germany, although he had no medical training.

Calvin C. Preater, 24, of Morris Plains, N. J., was witness at the court-martial of an officer charged with neglect of duty at the prison camp.

He said he was instructed in his duties by Capt. Joel G. Holmes, Jr., of Philadelphia, the Army medical officer who is on trial. Three other officers face the same charge.

Treated Private Suggs. Preater, himself a prisoner, said he was assigned to the stockade dispensary, although he had no medical training.

He testified that on one occasion he treated Pvt. Joseph Suggs, a Negro soldier who is a chief witness against Holmes. Both of Suggs' feet were amputated. He testified they were frostbitten in a solitary confinement cell at Wurzburg.

Preater said when Suggs called for medical attention, he took his temperature and pulse. He said he then gave Suggs sulfadiazene, although he said he did not know what effect it would have.

Preater said he examined Suggs for appendicitis after he complained of an abdominal pain. He added that Suggs' cell was uncomfortably cold at the time he made the examination.

Preater was dishonorably discharged after being convicted by a court-martial in England on larceny charges.

No Medical Orders. Dr. Nicholas P. R. Spinelli, former captain assigned to the stockade, said he had never seen copies of orders prescribing medical routine and said as far as he knew none had been given to Holmes.

Earlier, Lieut. William Case, the prison's medical detachment administrative officer, testified that the camp's records were destroyed when it was deactivated in 1947.

The three other officers awaiting trial are Col. Harold H. McClune (ret.), San Antonio, Tex., Wurzburg commanding officer; Lieut. Col. George E. Pinard, Westinghouse Springs, S. Dak., prison officer, and Capt. Samuel H. Wolford, Clear Spring, Md., commanding officer of the prison stockade.

Truman Supports Pay Hike Measure For D. C. Employees

On the Federal and District salary fronts, there were several major news developments yesterday.

1. The President called his Democratic congressional leaders to the White House to urge them to act immediately on the bill to raise the salaries of Federal executives and to give $330 retroactive pay raises to the 7500 classified District government employees and the 6000 Foreign Service people.

He's reported to have told the congressional high command that he's 100 per cent behind the bill as it stands, that he knows of no good reason why it can't be written into law within the next couple of weeks.

The President is said to have opposed further hearings or amendments to the measure. He promised the "Big Four" that other Federal officials and many employees would get pay raises in a reclassification bill which is slated to be sent to Congress soon. He emphasized that speed was important on the O'Connor-Flanders-Lucas-Baldwin bill.

2. Senator O'Connor (D., Md.) was appointed chairman of a subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee, to handle the several pay bills before the group, including the executive, District and Foreign Service bill.

Serving with him are Broughton of North Carolina, Louis of Louisiana, Flanders of Vermont, and Baldwin of Connecticut. The appointments were made by Chairman Johnston of South Carolina.

O'Connor said he would act immediately to get the executive, District, and Foreign Service bill back on the Senate floor. Several committee members have considered combining this bill with the one to reclassify Federal salaries. Also before the subcommittee is the Johnston bill to give postal and classified employees a flat increase of $650.

3. O'Connor put in a bill to overhaul the postal salary and leave systems. His bill would:

Reduce the number of carrier and clerk grades from 11 to 7 and to replace the present salary range of $2550 to $3550 with $3300 to $3900. Similar increases would be given other postal employees, including supervisors.

Eliminate third- and fourth-class postmasters and give first-class ratings to all offices having receipts of $5000 or more a year. There would be 43 different salary grades of first-class postmasters, ranging from $4500 to $14,000 a year. In the second class would be 18 different salary grades ranging from $2500 to $3000.

All services by any postal employee would count toward longevity credits, or automatic promotions, and several new classes of promotions would be added.

It provides 26 days annual and 15 days sick leave for postal employees and time and a half pay for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Substitute employees would be paid time and a half for all work in excess of 84 hours during a two-week pay period.

JAMES MITCHELL was approved unanimously by the Senate Civil Service Committee for appointment to the Civil Service Commission. His nomination will be taken up in the Senate tomorrow.

A displaced career employee appeared before the committee to protest against the inability of the commission to find jobs for the 1000 DCEs. However, his complaint was against the entire commission, not against Mr. Mitchell personally.

CAFETERIAS: A subcommittee to look into cafeterias operated in Federal buildings was set up by Chairman Johnston. Senator Neely (D., W. Va.) is chairman, and serving with him are Broughton of North Carolina, Frear of Delaware, Langer of North Dakota, and Baldwin of Connecticut.

Meantime, Baldwin is ready to introduce a bill which would carry out the President's plan to create a self-sustaining Government corporation to take over the Government Services, Inc., and other operators of cafeterias and recreation activities on Federal property. The corporation would be in the Federal Works Agency.

GOLD MEDALS will be given to two Treasury employees here today by Secretary Snyder. The employees who will get the first such awards for superior work will be Arthur E. Mills of the Disbursements Division and Peter J. Valer, Jr., a scientist in the Alcohol Tax Unit.

Mills invented improvements on check-writing machines which will save the Government millions of dollars. He merged into one four different operations to greatly reduce the time of writing a check. And Treasury writes about a million each day. Valer has been in Government 42 years and he developed streamlined methods of testing alcohol which will save the taxpayers more millions.

NOTES: Representative Olin Teague (D., Tex.) will be given a life membership in the respected United National Association of Post Office Clerks. He's a former postal employee and a member of the group. . . . Dr. Ewald T. Grether has resigned as director of economic management of the National Security Resources Board. He'll return to the University of California. . . . Charles Eckenrode is the new president of the AFGE lodge at the National Training School for Boys here. Other officers are George Heim, Robert Clamley, Willis Butts and Howard Heath.

Jury Hears Keleher for 20 Minutes

John B. Keleher, 67, who is accused by his estranged wife of being a kingpin bookmaker here, spent 20 minutes yesterday before the special grand jury investigating gambling here.

Also testifying for little more than five minutes was Mrs. Dorothy Blake, 44, correspondent in the divorce suit filed against Keleher. His wife, Mrs. Anna T. Keleher, 50, is understood to have voluntarily given information to the United States Attorney's office previously.

Keleher, a once-convicted gambler whose wife claims he makes $30,000 a month, said that he answered all questions propounded to him in the closed grand jury session. In his recent divorce trial, he denied any present gambling activity but said he is living off "investments."

Mrs. Blake, too, said she answered all questions asked her. As Keleher and Mrs. Blake left the Municipal Courthouse together, Mrs. Blake shook a reporter's hand and said, "I hope I never have to see you again."

"I won't say that," Keleher quipped, "but if I see you, I hope it's at Hialeah."

Renewed District Bar Association opposition to Senate confirmation of Edward A. Tamm as associate judge of District Court was presented yesterday to a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee.

Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) said the bar's protest against Tamm would make a formal hearing necessary. He said he hoped to arrange it for this week.

Tamm was opposed by the District and American Bar Association last year when President Truman first nominated him to the District bench. Bar officials objected mainly that Tamm, as assistant to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, had not engaged in the practice of law, and had not gained courtroom experience as a trial lawyer.

Tamm is now serving as associate judge under a recess appointment.

APARTMENT AD PLACER SEIZED IN $105 FRAUDS

An unemployed former postoffice worker yesterday accepted $105 in 45 minutes as deposits for apartments he did not have and then was arrested.

McKinley M. Young, 25, of 1504 Stevens rd. nw., according to the Washington Daily News and then accepted deposits from 15 applicants in the lobby of the apartment house at 520 Lamont st. nw.

The arrest came after one of the applicants became suspicious, checked on him and got the police on his trail.

The suspicious applicant was Mrs. Rita Lewis, 5210 East Capitol st. ne., a State Department employee, who gave Young a $10 deposit. After checking, Mrs. Lewis went back to Young and demanded her money back.

Still busily taking deposits from applicants, Young told Mrs. Lewis if she would go around the corner with him to a phone he would prove to her she had made a mistake.

As Young walked down the steps of the apartment house, Detective Sergeant John Apostolides and R. J. Luskey arrived and Mrs. Lewis pointed Young out to them. They said Young confessed the whole thing was a fraud. He was booked for a hearing today on a false pretexts charge. The policemen said Young's victims will get their deposits back.

Young Is Prepared To Ask Legislation If Needed to Curb After-Hour Resorts

By William E. Gold
Post Reporter

Commissioner J. Russell Young yesterday proposed that public hearings be held on the question of new legislation to end after-hours drinking in Washington.

"We have a bad situation here," Young said, "and we want to correct it—wipe it out if necessary. So far, we have formed no conclusions. First we want to hear from the clubs, the public, and the legitimate licensed dispensers."

"Then if we find that new legislation is the only answer, we'll propose it."

Both Young and Commissioner Guy Mason indicated that the type of "new legislation" which appealed to them was Missouri's law, which was suggested as a model by Corporation Counsel Vernon West.

Missouri Law Provisions

As described over the telephone by Missouri enforcement officials, the law there prohibits the sale of liquor between 1:30 a. m. and 6 a. m.

Hotels and clubs may remain open after 1:30, but all liquor must be under lock and key after that, whether it is the property of the establishment or the patron.

All-night drinking has gone on in local after-hours clubs because "members" bought their own bottles, and left them at the club for convenience. The club was supposed to sell only setups.

However, police have charged after recent raids that the clubs were not restricted to members only, and that they sold liquor to those who had no bottles of their own.

Investigations Under Way

Commissioner Young stated that Corporation Counsel West and Supt. of Police Robert J. Barrett were currently conducting investigations, and would file reports "within a few weeks."

When those reports are received, public hearings probably will be held before legislative recommendations are made.

Prior to finishing his report, West said yesterday:

"Really to correct this situation will require new legislation. That much is certain. The Missouri law has been upheld by the State Supreme Court, and may be the answer." Commissioner Mason said the law would require further study, to find whether it would meet local requirements.

While the studies are being completed, Commissioner Young warned that the police would continue to put undercover men in local clubs, to see whether liquor laws were being violated. He said:

"Even if these places obeyed the technicalities of the law, they would probably be regarded as 'undesirable' because they lend themselves to trouble."

And legitimate dispensers of liquor are complaining, understandably. The legitimate places pay high license fees, and are closely regulated. Their competition pays only a $2 occupancy fee, and is not regulated.

"We recognize that many people work while others sleep—cab drivers, printers, entertainers, newspapermen, motion picture projectionists, and many others. The Commissioners don't know what provision can be made for such people. That's the purpose of the public hearings."

Asked whether he thought that a later closing hour on Saturday might help licensed places, compete with after-hours clubs, Young said: "That's another matter we could discuss at those hearings. At present we have a bad situation, aren't ready to call it a night at midnight."

Lieut. C. O. Rouse, 5 Other Police Retire, 7th Quits

Retirement of six policemen and resignation of a seventh were announced yesterday by the District Commissioners. Among those retiring was Lieut. Clyde O. Rouse, 47, holder of the department's highest award for heroism.

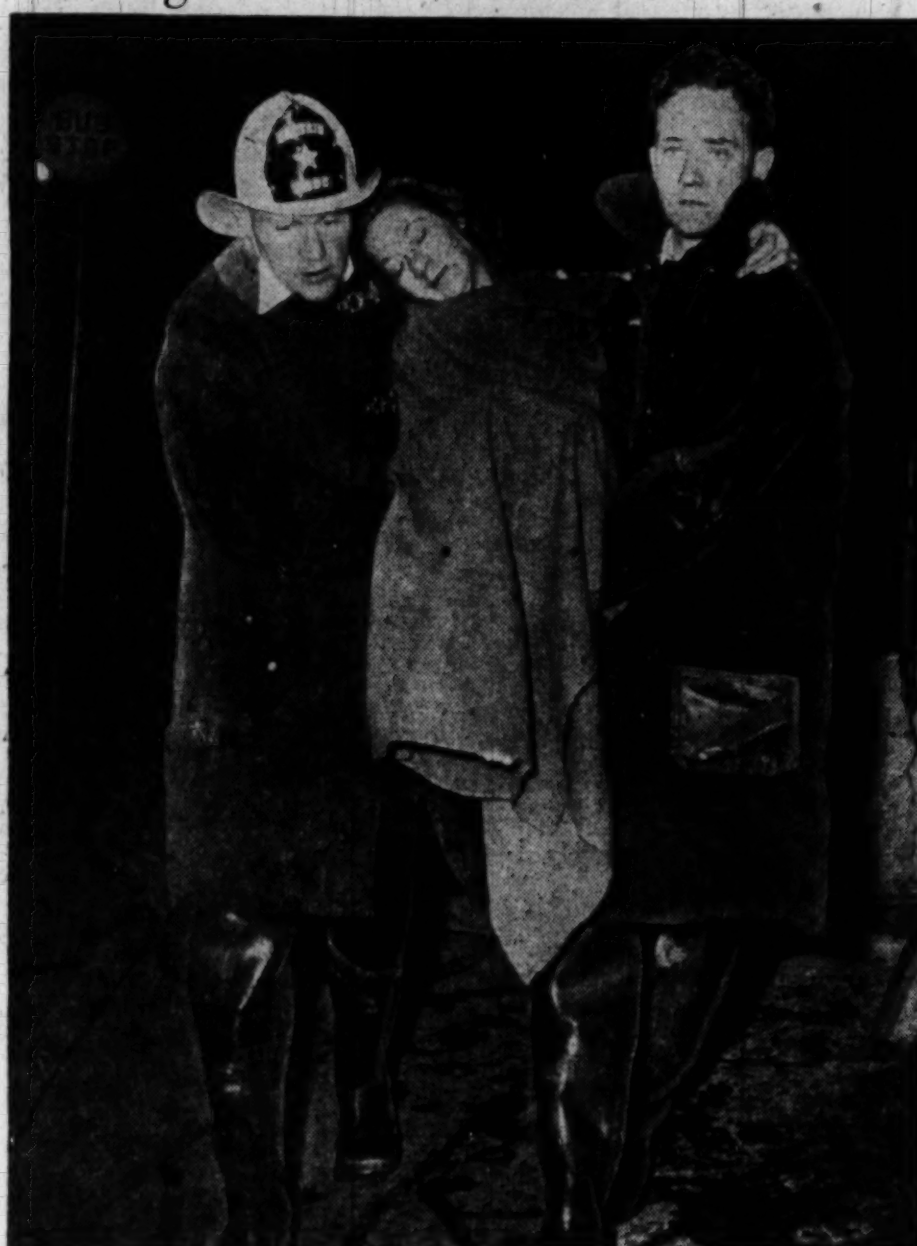

Lieutenant Rouse, who has been in the department almost 25 years, was seriously injured in an auto crash while on duty November 1, 1946. He and a mate clung to the sides of a car, attempting to arrest the driver of the stolen vehicle. Since then he has been an aide to Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett.

The other retirements are Lieut. William R. Lutes of the U. S. Park Police, 48; Pvt. Myrl T. Clark, 44; Pvt. Francis W. Springfield, 32; Pvt. James B. Waddie, 47; and Pvt. Everett S. Kirkpatrick, 35. Pvt. Paul C. Perry of the Juvenile Bureau, resigned.

Dentist Says Curb on Sweets Is Better Than Using Fluoride

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

If children want to keep their teeth healthy, they should cut out soft drinks and chewing gum, Dr. E. Reed Smith of the District Dental Society said yesterday.

The dentist recommended that the lunch basket contain raw carrot or half a raw apple instead of a sweet. A limited amount of candy should be eaten only as a dinner dessert, he said.

Dr. Smith outlined his austerity program for children at a meeting of Parent-Teacher Association health chairmen at the Adams Elementary School.

He said that if parents followed his recommendations, 85 per cent of children's tooth decay would be eliminated.

Dr. Smith, a member of the oral hygiene committee of the Dental Society, is one of a group of dentists authorized by the society to lecture on caries prevention.

Cutting out the highly concentrated sweets, he said, is far more effective than the well publicized sodium fluoride treatment.

Every child, though, should have the treatment, Dr. Smith said. He recommended painting the teeth at the ages of 3, 7, 10, 13, and 16 to catch all of the teeth before decay has a chance to set in.

To assure proper diet children should be given 6 ounces of orange juice a day, two eggs and a quart of milk, he told the parents.

Teeth should be scrubbed after breakfast and immediately after dinner, not waiting for bedtime, he said. The raw carrot or the apple will cleanse the mouth after lunch.

Auto Man Held On Charges of Title Forgery

Louis J. Bonbrest, used car dealer residing at 254 Portland st. se., was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with forging a signature on a District automobile title.

Judge George D. Neilson continued the case for hearing February 4. Bond was set at $1500. According to the charge Bonbrest forged the name of Capt. Bruce C. Beck of Bolling Air Base to a title for a 1948 automobile.

Bonbrest, who is 50, three weeks ago was found with two bullet wounds in his chest. Police said that Bonbrest said he shot himself.

'Influence' In Patterson Will Denied

Papers filed in District Court yesterday described the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson as a person who could not have been pressured by outside influences in making her will.

Attorney John J. Carmody, appointed by the court to protect the interests of 20-year-old Henry Le Fort, Jr., son of a chauffeur for Mrs. Patterson, stated that Mrs. Patterson was "not the type of person who would be subject to any influence, undue or otherwise, in a matter so important as her last will and testament."

Carmody, in the papers, aligned himself in his role as guardian ad litem for young Le Fort, with those who are defending the validity of the will of the late owner-publisher of the Washington Times-Herald.

Mrs. Felicia Glycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson, is challenging the will on grounds that her mother was of unsound mind when she made it, and was subjected to fraud and undue influence.

Carmody described Mrs. Patterson as a "talented and resourceful executive," who was "charitable by nature and the objects of her bounty were many and varied."

Young Le Fort, known as Jerry, would receive $5000 under the will. A resident of Upper Marlboro, Md., he attended Eastern High School, 1948, studied later, at Devitt Preparatory School and was now said to be attending Clemson College.

Traffic Lieutenant To Attend Institute

Police Lieut. John J. Boyd of the Traffic Division has been selected as a fellow of the Kemper Foundation for Traffic Safety and will attend the Northwestern University Traffic Institute from January 31 to June 18.

Couple Suffers Severe Injuries In Blaze Here

Three Others Hurt When Fire Sweeps 3-Story Rooming House At 200 E St.

Two persons were burned severely and three others suffered minor injuries when fire of undetermined origin spread over a three-story rooming house at 200 E st. nw. last night.

Rescued by firemen and taken to Casualty Hospital for first and second-degree burns of the face, hands and body were Grace Eichel, 23, and Fred Eichel, 45, identified only as residents of that address.

Treated at Gallinger Hospital and released were Ann Covington, 35, a beautician; George Primrose, 65, a cab driver; and Leonard Ball, 64.

The fire started in the rear, two-story part of the structure at about 9 p. m., then spread to the third floor of the adjacent main building, according to firemen.

Three engine companies and a truck company responded, along with two rescue squads and a Health Department ambulance.

Police said the Eichels were removed from the rear part of the building, while the other three casualties were taken from the front section.

Oil Truck Driver Speeds Flaming Vehicle to Aid

A 27-year-old truck driver, seated between blazing wires and a 5900-gallon cargo of fuel oil, drove his truck into a service station at 140 Florida ave. ne. last night and put out the fire.

He is Raymond E. Hammill of the 4400 block of N. 16th st. n. w. The wiring system of his truck caught fire at 3d st. and New York ave. ne. shortly after 6 p. m.

Station attendants helped him turn fire extinguishers on the blaze while a bystander called the Fire Department. An explosion had been averted and the fire virtually put out when they arrived.

Sports Trio Help Police Net Car Thief After Chase

Helping in the capture were Arnold (Red) Auerbach, coach of the Washington Caps basketball team; Sidney (Sonny) Hertzberg, one of his players; and Morris Siegel, sports writer for The Washington Post.

At about 10:15 p. m., Pts. J. A. Ronayne and J. S. Croson of the Third Precinct, cruising in Scout Car 32, caught sight of a car that had been reported stolen at 6 p. m. from the rear of 1719 I st. nw.

The car was just pulling away from the curb in the 400 block of 24th st. nw. Police chased the car around the block several times, then down a pathway behind the Heinrich Brewery, then out on C st. to 26th st., then north on 26th st. to a pathway behind the old gas company building.

They finally found the car smashed against a plug at a filling station at Virginia ave. and Riverside dr. nw. and the driver gone.

Auerbach, Hertzberg and Siegel were driving from the brewery when the chase went by and followed it briefly. They lost sight of the cars but a few minutes later, at 26th st. and Virginia ave. nw., they saw a youth running south on 26th st.

At this moment Croson appeared on foot and asked them to follow the youth. Jumping into their car, Croson arrested the boy while a few blocks away he was preparing to enter a house in the 500 block of New Hampshire ave. nw.

Bible Study In Schools Protested

A "Battle of the Bible" was waged before the Arlington School Board last night as spokesmen demanded that voluntary religious instruction be discontinued in county public schools.

The school board referred the issue to its attorney, Frank L. Ball, Jr. Ball is to determine whether the Arlington program is out of line with the kind declared legal by Virginia Attorney General Lindsey Almond, Jr.

Nearly 650 persons filled every seat in the James Monroe School as L. D. MacIntyre, president of the Washington Ethical Society and chairman of the Arlington Provisional Committee for Separation of Church and School, challenged the board's program adopted last September.

Parents Give Permission

Classes are held for fourth, fifth and sixth-grade pupils who get their parents' permission, for one hour weekly during school hours and generally in school buildings.

Mrs. Charlotte Chase, 4824 S. 29th st., Arlington, protested that "as far as anybody can see" this religious instruction program is sectarian education "along Protestant lines."

She said she is a member of the Washington Ethical Society.

Also speaking against the Arlington program was A. J. Robbins, pastor of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church of Arlington, who said he believed the program in the county violates the Supreme Court's decision.

"Public schools," he said, "should not be used as an agency to promote and foster religious education." He said such instruction "has a tendency to arouse religious controversies."

Discrimination Charged

According to MacIntyre, Attorney General Almond's interpretation of a recent United States Supreme Court decision does not jibe with what he termed the sectarian use of 18 Arlington schools under the present program.

He declared that Arlington's present program "is sectarian teaching because it discriminates in favor of certain Protestant sects." He asked that the board discontinue the religious instruction.

If the request is not followed, MacIntyre has said, the issue will be taken to the courts.

Appearing on the other side of the issue was the Rev. Warren Lee Oltis, pastor of Ballston Baptist Church, who urged that study of the Holy Bible be continued in Arlington schools to aid in the development of our youth as law-abiding, public-spirited and conscientious citizens.

Arlington's religious instruction is provided by three full-time teachers paid by the Arlington Council of Religious Education.

A public mass meeting will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday in Constitution Hall, where Bishop G. Bromley Oxman will be the featured speaker.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Psychology Student at University, Faithful Reader of This Column, Thinks Its Language And Thought Are Over the Head of Common Man

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a student in psychology at the university, and I have been following your column with great interest for several years. Now I am writing to offer constructive criticism—not of your replies, but of your usage of language.

I repeat and emphasize that I am not questioning the substance of your replies. You have been giving some wonderful advice, but can the majority of your readers fully grasp its meaning?

You may be pleased to know that professors and students of psychology here endorse your slant about 95 per cent of the time. But even so, they feel as I do, that your language is above the average level, and is keyed to a higher plane of thinking—that the common man can understand.

At times our psychology group is obliged to study some of your paragraphs very carefully, to get the exact meaning; and this being so, what can the ordinary person get from your replies, if he hasn't finished grade school or high school? I believe you will agree that the common man has a very hard time thinking in abstract terms. Even persons of above-normal intelligence sometimes find it difficult.

Thinks Our Style Seems Uninhibited

THUS I will wager that some of your audience, perhaps more than you realize, get halfway through your articles and then give up; or perhaps read all the way through and at the end haven't "got" what you were trying to say. Or, worse yet, a person seeking advice may misinterpret your reply and come up with the "wrong answer."

In trying to figure out why you write as you do, certain thoughts occur to me. Perhaps you have built up an extensive vocabulary, due to wide association, constant reading and long experience in your field, and use it instinctively, without inhibitions, when writing. Or perhaps you were forced to adopt your particular style, due to limited space allocated your column.

Of course I am aware that many psychological concepts can't be translated into simple words without "crippling" the meaning; but I hope you will consider my criticism, and I would appreciate your views in the matter.

We Think Better of Common Man

DEAR M. F. First pluck the beam from thine eye, son. I've spent three hours condensing your critique to one-fourth its original length, punching your points and keeping them all. Quite a chore, but a typical sample of my daily effort to reduce ideas to simplest language.

As for the campus theory that my writings are over the heads of average readers, I've heard it before, from other sources; but the bulk of my mail refutes it. The average reader, bless his (or her) heart, seems to know very well what I'm getting at; and testifies most cordially to a "meeting of minds" when he, or she, has had some experience with the particular problem discussed.

Life experience, not academic drilling, is the key to understanding; and watchful interest in helpful viewpoints, plus willingness to use one's head for purposes of self-improvement, are the chief requirements of learning. In general, I write to an adult audience considerably schooled in adversity, and thereby prepared to grasp my "thinking" with instinctive understanding.

Specialist Rebuts Our Student Critic

ALWAYS my efforts are in the direction of phrasing ideas more simply; but the reader's opinion of how well I succeed in this depends, of course, upon the extent of his knowledge or "human understanding" of the subject on which I speak.

For example, you, a tenderfoot student of life, find my writings "tough going" at times. But a specialist of 35 years' professional experience, a long-time Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association, writes me as follows: "You are taking dynamic psychiatry to the public in non-technical terms, which psychoanalysts have failed to do, and are therefore performing an invaluable service to the public." And so I leave that thought with you.

Caramel Rolls With Coconut

There's a touch of coconut in these delicious caramels, which look like tiny slices of jelly roll.

CARAMEL ROLLS

2 cups sugar 1/2 cup butter
Dash of salt 2 cups heavy cream
2 cups corn sirup 1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup coconut

Combine sugar, salt, and sirup. Cook until blended, stirring constantly; then cook without stirring until candy forms a firm ball in cold water (245 degrees Fahrenheit) stirring occasionally. Add butter, then cream gradually. Cook rapidly to firm ball stage (242 degrees Fahrenheit), stirring frequently. Add vanilla and turn into buttered pan. Cool slightly. Sprinkle with coconut and roll as for jelly roll. Cut and cool. This recipe makes about 3 pounds candy.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

A number of years ago a study was made which showed that even young children, if they were presented with a variety of choices in food, would select a good balanced diet over a period of time. Though in the usual home, it is impractical to repeat this laboratory-type of experiment, we parents can be more flexible in the preparation of meals.

If a youngster objects to the slippery feel of soft-boiled eggs—and many children do—the egg can be mixed with pieces of bread or other dry cereals. If he dislikes the taste of spinach, there are many other vegetables with as good food value. Insistence that every bit of a particular food be eaten is not necessary.

Naturally, we don't want to develop finicky tastes in our children. As a matter of fact, however, struggling to make them eat everything, never allowing them any choices and in general developing an unpleasant situation at meal-times are much more likely to develop finickiness than is a more flexible approach to eating.

Meet Gary Davis

Dissatisfied With Models Manufactured in Detroit, He Made a Colorful Car

By Mary Von Rensselaer Thayer

REMEMBER the luscious green-wheeled Davis automobile pictured on the cover of last Sunday's Parade magazine? Well, the designer and manufacturer has been in town this past week showing off his brain-child.

He's slim, dark Gary Davis, who dresses in expensive Hollywood style and is handsomer than most Hollywood movie stars. He's a Kentuckian who sauntered Hollywood way some fifteen years back after considerable toil with such conventional gas-buggies as the Cadillac. Along the line, he developed a distaste for chromium and the unimaginative sameness of cars rolling down the Detroit production line.

So he commenced whipping up exciting auto bodies for California notables and was partnered in the venture by such glamour gals as Greta Garbo and Eleanor Powell. One of Davis' earlier successes was a canvas top juxtaposed over the usual metal, which gave an ordinary car a sporty air.

When Clark Gable whizzed around in one, everyone screamed for a similar gadget.

Influenced by Fair Sex

DAVIS HAS BEEN working on his car for some time and the fairer sex definitely influenced its design. Realizing women went in for color, he figured matching upholstery would be pleasing. So the Davis slipcovers come in 30 different tones, detach easily, and for a small extra sum a fashion-conscious female can synchronize all of her costumes with harmonizing upholstery.

Some of Hollywood's fanciest actresses selected their favorite colors for the actual car. Instead of the usual sober shades available for ordinary vehicle, Davis purchasers can run riot in pastels.

There's an orchid precisely the same as that smart new nail polish, a chartreuse and a wonderful brown which Davis labels "Autumn"—and jade, sapphire blue, scarlet. Besides an enormous indentation for luggage behind the single seat, there's a semicircular windshield, automatic jacks and great ease in parking—all for the ladies! "There's no doubt," mused Davis, "the car has sex appeal!"

Woodlawn Fund Growing

ON JANUARY 5 the Circuit Court of Fairfax County extended the deadline for the Woodlawn Public Foundation Inc.'s fund-raising campaign to February 21. By that date the sum necessary for purchasing Woodlawn is expected to be raised. Patriotic organizations, throughout the country, neighboring public school children, in Alexandria and Fairfax, private donations and, finally, Paul Mellon's generous offer to match every dollar gift with two of his own, are doing the trick.

If all goes well, title will be taken by the Foundation on Washington's birthday, February 22. Washington's birthday is a most important date in Woodlawn history.

For on our First President's last birthday, his adopted daughter, Nellie Custis, was married to his favorite nephew, Lawrence Lewis. As wedding gift, Washington deeded them 2000 acres of adjoining property, surveyed and selected "Grays Hill" as site for their home. Writing to his nephew about Grays Hill, Washington said "few better sites for a house are to be found in this country or elsewhere."

Washington even made rough sketches for the mansion which were finished and carried out by Dr. William Thornton, who designed the National Capitol. As result of this brilliant collaboration, Woodlawn is one of the finest examples of Georgian architecture in this country.

Almost Went to Foreigners

THE LEWISES lived in Woodlawn 35 years, entertained most notable visitors from overseas including the Marquis de Lafayette who presented them with two bands for Woodlawn's main fireplaces. Eventually Woodlawn passed through many hands—Woodrow Wilson tried to buy it, Harry Woodring lived there during his tenure as Secretary of War, the Oscar Underwoods owned it for many years.

When Mrs. Underwood died last September, this property connected with George Washington, almost passed to foreigners.

A Belgian religious order, The Immaculate Heart of Mary Mission, Inc., wished to revamp Woodlawn into a seminary. However, when a group of local "patriots" determined that it should be preserved as a national shrine, the Belgians courteously stood aside.

The Fairfax County court granted a stay until January 3 to raise the required sum, then extended it until February. President of the Foundation's trustees is George Maurice Morris, former president of the Bar Association. Among the other trustees are Robert Woods Bliss, Senator Byrd, Mrs. Dwight Davis and Douglas S. Freeman, author of a Washington biography and editor of the Richmond News Leader.

THE NAVY ORDNANCE BUREAU will have as its guests to the benefit performance of the Ice Capades on Thursday night 22 convalescing service men and veteran patients from the Bethesda Naval Hospital and Mount Alto Veterans' Hospital. Shown above, Mrs. A. G. Noble, wife of Rear Admiral Noble, who is Chief of Naval Ordnance, presents a ticket for the show to Seaman William Siebert of Springfield, Ill., a Naval Hospital patient. The Ice Show is sponsored by the Women's Army-Navy League to augment the endowment fund of its Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

Raising Health, Education Levels Is Government's Job, Barkley Says

By Genevieve Reynolds
VICE PRESIDENT ALBEN BARKLEY declared yesterday that the increasing complexities of this Nation's social, industrial and economic life compel the Government to move into more and more fields of public welfare.

Indorsing the President's health program, he asserted that "contrary to some people's belief the U. S. Government will not take over the medical practice of this country." The same motives that prompted the Government's soil conservation program leads the Government to embark on the health project, he explained. "The aim is to in-crease healthful conditions throughout the Nation so that good health will be the rule rather than the exception," he stated.

At the same time the Vice President reiterated his longtime support of Federal aid to education and predicted "the Government is liable to go further into the educational field than it has in the past."

The Vice President enunciated his belief in the "Fair Deal Program" when he appeared as principal speaker at a luncheon meeting sponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Purpose of the federation gathering of business executives, community and club leaders, town planners and Government officials was to launch a Nation-wide community improvement project, in cooperation with the Kroger Co. of Cincinnati.

Getting Things Done

Commending the federation on its community project, Vice President Barkley reminded the audience, "People have come to regard the Government more and more as a State agent because of its power to enforce its decrees. When a community wants something done which not even the church, Rotary Board or Kiwanis Clubs can do, the Government must step in to help. That's why the Government finds itself compelled to move into fields to work with voluntary organizations to build up the level of citizenship. Whatever builds up one citizen raises the standard of the Nation."

He said that he agreed completely with the theory that Government cannot remain aloof from the people nor the people aloof from the Government. "Government is the only organized agency to enforce laws," maintained Vice President Barkley. "At the same time it is necessary to stimulate organizations such as yours (General Federation of Women's Clubs) so the ground may be fertilized for the Government's program."

Averting that he was speaking not as a Vice President or Senator but as an American and fellow citizen, he stated that he believed each generation should attain a little higher level than the preceding generation. "... so we may inspire other peoples on the road to progress ... so that the world itself may visualize a happier, more peaceful and contented people, more satisfied with their governments because they have a part in it, and all have freedom.

Controversial Project

Decision to accept the Kroger Co.'s offer of $60,000 for a Nation-wide "community improvement project" was reached at the federation's board meeting early last fall after considerable controversy among board members. Strongest opponent of the project was Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, past president of the GFWC.

Actual launching of the project was announced at the luncheon yesterday by Mrs. Buck. "The GFWC is an organization of some five million women in the United States and about two million in 27 foreign countries," she explained. "For more than 50 years the federation has been deeply interested in community improvement." The federation head went on to point out that the federation had through its youth conservation program focused a broad attack on the problem of juvenile delinquency and its causes through national, State and local action.

National Contest

"Because of our long history in community welfare, the GFWC has been glad to accept the cooperation of the Kroger company in planning what is to be known as the 'Build a Better Community Program,'" stated Mrs. Buck. "This is to be a Nation-wide contest to stimulate the promotion of community improvement projects by the Federated Clubs throughout the United States. The Kroger company, which operates a chain of retail food stores throughout the Middle West, is generously contributing the prize money. All prizes will go directly to the winning clubs for use in their communities."

Total amount of the prizes will be $60,000. Clubs will be divided into three categories according to size. The club in each category whose project is judged to have made the greatest contribution to the betterment of its community will be awarded a first prize of $5000. Second prize will be $3000 and the third will be $2000. An additional $5000 will go to the best of the three top winning projects.

Businessmen Guests
Joseph B. Hall, president, the Kroger Co., said that his company believes that "business has a responsibility toward the communities in which it operates." Seward H. Mott, executive director, Urban Land Institute, indorsed the federation's project in another luncheon speech.

Guests at the head table, in addition to Vice President Barkley and Mrs. Buck, included Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d, Senator A. Willis Robertson of Virginia and several members of the federation's community improvement committee, including Mrs. Cogley G. Cole, president of the Indiana Federation; Mrs. Robert W. Correll, president, New Jersey Federation; Mrs. William B. Fowler, president, Tennessee Federation; and Mrs. Hiram C. Houghton of Iowa, first vice president of the federation.

Washington Club Elects Governors

The Washington Club yesterday elected three governors and elected two others to serve as members of the board of governors. The president will be elected from the group next month.

Mrs. LeRoy Eakin, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann and Mrs. G. Louis Weller, were re-elected, and the new members are Mrs. Mark Eldredge, and Mrs. Alexander Wetmore.

Miss Grace Burton, first vice president, presided at the meeting in the absence of Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, president, who is in Florida.

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, who will write the history of the Washington Club, reported that the book would be ready in two-years, when the club reaches its 60th birthday.

On the Party Calendar

Mrs. Werlich Fetes Mrs. Downe, Of Paris and Connecticut

By Marie McNair

To meet Mrs. Henry F. Downe is an opportunity that should come to everyone.

A great lady, a citizen of the world, she's in addition a bright, entertaining person, good looking and full of charm.

Although she's lived for many years in France, Connecticut is really her home. And as a voter, and a patriot she was named an elector of her State. It was one of the rare occasions in her life that she was wrong. She voted for Governor Dewey.

However, she's lived that down already, is in Washington for the winter and with her old friend, Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, in Georgetown.

Mrs. Downe, a leading American hostess in Paris in the days before the war, wasn't one of the first to rush back to this country on the first available boat after war was declared. In fact, she walked out of her house on Rue Verdi a scant 24 hours before the Nazis marched in, with a single bag as her only luggage and leaving a house full of treasures behind.

Yesterday she was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by Mrs. McConeny Werlich whom she has known for years, at her home on 16th st. And the gathering included old friends as well as Government figures and members of the Diplomatic Corps.

In a Paris Frock

"This hat's three years old," said Mrs. Downe proudly as she patted the French number, a felt crown with wavy horsehair brim, which rested on her silver hair. She wore diamond and green jade earrings and a Paris frock of black crepe with fine tucks running diagonally on the bodice. Mrs. Werlich's frock was black, too, and a sparkling necklace of diamonds and turquoise was about her throat.

When it's a small party at Gladys Werlich's house, guests are not expected to venture beyond the two connecting drawing rooms.

Yesterday everybody went on to the large dining room beyond, with its ceiling-high mirrors, massive old furnishings which have been a part of the house since the hostess was a child.

There was a tea table with a hammered tall silver decoration holding flowers in the center. But nobody took tea. Cocktails went the rounds constantly and guests nibbled on a huge ham, and a variety of canapés.

Senators There

Connecticut's Republican Senator Raymond Baldwin, and Mrs. Baldwin were there yesterday and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, wife of the Senator from Michigan, was hoping her husband would catch up with her before the party was over.

A foursome around the tea table were Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock and her guest, Mrs. Frank Crump of Memphis; Miss Janet Fish and Mrs. Karl Muntz, wife of the Senator from South Dakota. Freda Utley who wrote "Last Chance for China" and has a new book, "High Cost of Vengeance" dealing with the German problem, coming out in the spring, was talking to our former Ambassador to the Netherlands, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, and Mrs. Hornbeck. Lady Rama Rau, wife of the Indian Ambassador, was there with her daughter, tall and slim, Waile, and over a shoulder I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Owen Brewster, Mrs. George Barnett hurrying home to appease her cook; Mrs. Buchanan Merryman and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Graves.

Clarence Hewitt was enjoying this pleasant party and I saw Mrs. Edward H. Foley, Jr., wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle who got through inauguration week without casualty; Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, the essence of elegance in a black frock with a series of pleated tiers at the back.

To Florida
Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Reizenstein have left for Hollywood, Fla., where they will make an extended visit at Hollywood Beach Hotel.

It's Symmetry That Makes a Perfect Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

The gal in the mirror can tell us quite a bit about the shape we're in. Still, it's not always a true picture. To get away from any wishful looking, take the unbiased facts as given by the tape measure. Those figures don't lie.

Again, whip out the tape—the one on which you marked the measurements of bust, abdomen and hips... in red letters. Now to get the formula for fitness and a perfect figure for your frame. It's symmetry that counts, whether you are a size 12 or an 18.

A neat waist measures 7 to 9 inches less than the bust circumference, and trim hips measure not more than 3 inches larger than the bust... a 2-inch difference is streamlined. Let's try for streamlines: 8 from 34 is 26; 34 plus 2 equals 36. Bust 34, waist 26, hips 36. Ah, lovely.

That doesn't mean your waistline should measure exactly 26 inches, for there is no standard set of perfect measurements. The proportionate difference works out just as beautifully for the perfect 36 figure: 8 from 36 equals 28; add 2 to 36 and the answer is 38. That's a fine figure of a woman—bust 36, waist 28, hips 38. Use this formula to figure your proportions.

However, even with a fairly nice figure, measurements may not meet these specifications exactly... these are the perfect proportions at which to aim. So that you won't be too discouraged, here are the average measurements for size 36: bust 36, waist 30, hips 39.

But given an inch, don't take 4. A waistline that is only 4 or 5 inches less than the bust measurement is definitely dumpy, and hips that measure 4 or 5 inches more than the bust are definitely hefty. On the abdomen measurement, there should be a slight curve between the hip bones... a pronounced curve there is a bulge.

Mrs. Lytle Fox entertained at tea yesterday for members of her special gifts committee of the 1949 Red Cross Fund Campaign, which opens March 1.

Among those there yesterday were Mrs. Henry Frelinghuysen, Mrs. Paul Nitze, Mrs. John Auchincloss, Mrs. Arnold Weles, Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, Mrs. Peter Dewey, Mrs. John Farrington, Mrs. John Walker, Mrs. Eric Weinmann, Mrs. Raymond Guest, Mrs. Thad Brown, Jr., Mrs. Marshall Green, Lady Katherine Hume.

Others who have accepted leadership on the Special Gifts Committee are Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. J. Edgar Murdoch, Jr., Mrs. J. Craig Peacock, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, and Mrs. Tinsley Garnett.

All are busy recruiting the women who will aid them in the pre-campaign solicitation of Red Cross gifts among the community's wealthier givers.

Mrs. Charles Dewey's committee organization is already complete and ready to get under way with their Red Cross assignments. Her members include Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, Mrs. C. C. Glover, Mrs. Percy Black, Mrs. Franklin Ellis, Mrs. Nelson Perin, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mrs. Edward Fay, Mrs. Harry Hickey, Lady Welsh and Mrs. Stuart Symington.

Some measure of the responsibility which prominent women are assuming in the Red Cross Drive is seen in the fact that they are leaders of the workers in 3 out of the 12 Special Gifts Committees which make up the division headed by John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank.

Nine hundred and twenty-four thousand dollars is the total set as the Red Cross goal for this metropolitan area in the campaign which will open on March 1. Of this sum, the Special Gift volunteers are responsible for obtaining a large, though unannounced, quota.

Where to Get Feather Bed

Can you tell me where I might obtain a feather bed of the double-bed size, new? S. J.

Prune corn meal sticks are a treat at any meal

Nourishing, Flavorful Prunes
Are an Economical Favorite

By Lora Stone

Prunes have a rare versatility mate yield: 20 small fritters. Prunes en Brochette 12 to 15 prepared, pitted prunes
Pineapple chunks
Melted butter or margarine
Cinnamon
Brown sugar

Fill prune cavities with pineapple chunks. Place on skewers. Roll in butter; dust lightly with cinnamon; roll in brown sugar. Bake 15 minutes in moderate oven (350°F.) or broil about 2 inches from heat until prunes are glazed. Serve as garnish for meat. Yield: 6 portions.

To bring out the best and fullest flavor and to puff them up to their very plumpness, cover prunes with boiling water and store covered in the refrigerator overnight. No soaking, no stewing, no adding sugar is necessary. A wedge of lemon or orange peel added to the prunes will give an extra piquancy.

Here is a collection of recipes that takes fullest advantage of the inimitable consistency and flavor of this popular fruit.

Prune Dumpling Desert
1 envelope dry granulated yeast
¾ cup lukewarm water
3 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 1/3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
24 cooked prunes
¾ cup prune liquid
1 1/2 cups sugar

Soften yeast in water for 10 minutes. Cream together shortening, sugar and salt. Add flour alternately with yeast mixture. Dough will be quite sticky. Cover and store in refrigerator. When cool, work dough on floured board until smooth. Cover and return to refrigerator. This dough may be made two days in advance. Punch dough down once each day. Roll out dough about the size of a half-dollar, one dumpling per serving. Let rise two hours at room temperature. In a large kettle bring prunes, prune liquid and sugar to a boil. Add raisins, dumplings. Cover and steam 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot with cream. Yield: six portions.

Prune Dainties
Dried prunes
Brandy or Cointreau
Chopped pecans
Shredded, crumbled coconut

Cover prunes with liqueur and soak two or three days until prunes are well saturated. Remove pits. Stuff cavity of each prune with chopped nuts. Roll prunes in coconut. Serve as after-dinner sweet or at tea.

Prune Corn Meal Sticks
1 cup dried prunes
2 cups yellow corn meal
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
1 cup buttermilk or sour milk
2 eggs, beaten
¾ cup melted shortening

Soak prunes in boiling water 15 to 20 minutes. Remove pits and chop prunes. Sift together dry ingredients. Add prunes and toss until well coated with flour. Add remaining ingredients and mix only until flour is moistened. Pour into greased corn stick pans. Bake in hot oven (450°F.) 15 minutes. Yield: 14 corn sticks.

Prune Fritters
1 1/2 cups dried prunes
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
2 eggs, beaten
¾ cup milk
2 teaspoons melted shortening

Cover prunes with boiling water. Let stand 15 minutes. Remove pits and chop. Sift together dry ingredients. Add remaining ingredients and stir only until all the flour is moistened. Drop from teaspoon into deep hot fat (375°F.). Cook until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Good as accompaniment for pork. Approximate yield: 14 fritters.

Aren't Doing

By Arthur Edson

Hang onto that job, man. The women are after it. After it? They may already have it.

A Government report, "Women's Occupations Through Seven Decades," by Janet M. Hooks of the Women's Bureau, came out today. It shows that the ladies—bless their bulgy muscles and baggy coveralls—have taken over almost every job conceivable.

Once women chiefly did teaching, nursing, housewifery. But by 1940 there were 217 women sailors or deckhands, 131 grade-crossing watchmen or bridge tenders, 272 blacksmiths, forgewomen or hammerwomen, 1223 managers or owners of liquor stores, 1597 newspaper boys (or girls), 508 maids or tilesetters, 96 loom-fixers, 1717 paperhangers, 128 roofers. And so on and on.

The case of the woman veterinarian shows what has happened. In 1919—would you believe it?—We got by without any lady veterinarians. By 1920, we had one, and from then on it was Katy bar the door.

Sure, there were some decreases. Only 4606 women called themselves authors in 1940. In 1930, there were 5393. Women Centists fell off, too, from 1338 to 1067. But in general the march of the woman worker has been steady, and stuffy characters who resent it can take this advice: keep the Nation out of war.

The Civil War boosted women's role in teaching and nursing. World War I lured her into the factory. World War II riveted her there. She became a welder, a lathe operator, a blast furnace topman.

Yet, Miss Hooks says, there remain handicaps. Miss Hooks looked and looked, but couldn't find a single female locomotive engineer or fireman.

Your Baby Knowledge
Of First Aid
Saves Lives

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every mother wants, naturally, to act quickly and wisely in any situation which involves danger to her child. When there are serious injuries, one of the first considerations should be whether nothing should be done until expert help is available.

The child with a broken bone might be better off if left untouched or unmoved; merely covered and kept warm until he can be moved correctly so as not to compound his injury.

The mother has to use good judgment as well as loving emotions to determine whether the injury would be lessened by doing nothing than by doing something. No matter what the type of injury, a child also suffers from shock. Warmth, quiet, perhaps a teaspoon of spirits of ammonia, will aid this, and then the parent can wait until the doctor arrives to tell her what to do.

If she lives a long way from a doctor, then she should have some good book on first aid at hand, such as the Red Cross First Aid manual, or she should memorize some first aid for burns, bruises, breaks or cuts, so that she won't make a mistake when she has to put it into practice.

It is essential for the mother to remain calm. The injured child takes his cue from her and if she acts as if this were a tragic happening, he will accept her evaluation and fright will be added to his other miseries.

Every household where there are children should be prepared with simple aids for simple injuries.

The baby's toilet basket will contain absorbent cotton, boracic acid crystals, white vasoline, surgical gauze, powder, oil, safety pins and a fever thermometer. To this the mother will add, as she needs them, some preparation for dealing with burns, one to paint on cuts or bruises, calomine lotion for mild rashes and insect bites and some material for bandaging. Gradually she will fill up the medicine cabinet with the medicines used for the specific ailments the baby suffers.

Stocks Again Dip; Trading At Slow Pace

New York, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—The stock market declined for the second day in a row today after reaching a high since early November on Saturday.

Losses of fractions to around 2 points gave the market its largest overall setback in some 10 days. Market operations were affected considerably by a meeting of directors of United States Steel Corporation, results of which were not divulged until after the close of the market. Big Steel common stock is a market pivot and the meeting was preceded by the usual round of rumors concerning possible dividend or other action affecting the stock.

United States Steel's $1 special dividend and stock split-up have been rumored off and on in the financial district. But the general special was a flat surprise to many observers.

Steel common closed at 72 1/2, down 3/4, after losing more than a point at one time in frequent appearances on the ticker tape. On Monday the stock advanced 1 1/2 points in the face of a declining market.

Turnover was comparatively slow throughout and about on a par with recent sessions. Sales of 810,000 shares compared with 850,000 Monday.

Trading was mainly professional, with many operators doing nothing more than chipping away a 1/2 or 1 point profit wherever they could. Wall Street seemed unable to find anything in the news on which to base an aggressive course. Most traders, of course, still are waiting for congressional action on tax and labor legislation, but they aren't paying too much attention to good news or bad.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 4 of one point to 65.5, but the general price level back where it was on January 18. The industrial component took the widest loss while utilities held up a little better.

'Honeymoon Is Over,' Auto Dealers Warned

San Francisco, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—American automobile dealers, 7500 strong, met today at their first 1949 convention business session with this warning ringing in their ears: "The honeymoon is over."

It was delivered by a used car dealer yesterday by San Francisco (Ford) Dealer Charles C. Welch, agreed: "All of us had better take stock. The good old days of the seller's market are gone."

Dealers conceded there are now more used cars than buyers.

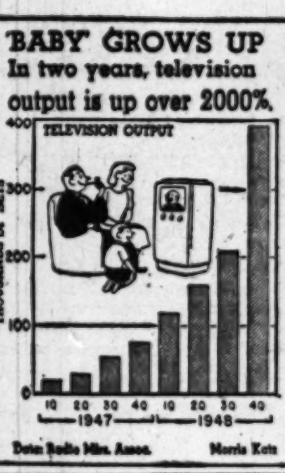

World Bank Sells Part Of Dutch Shipping Notes

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announced yesterday the sale of an additional $1,200,000 of Dutch shipping companies' serial mortgage notes, held in the Bank's portfolio since last August, to two New York State savings banks.

The savings banks paid par and accrued interest for the 2 1/2 per cent notes.

Steel Industry Outlay in 1949 Seen 627 Million

New York, Jan. 24 (U.P.).—The Iron and steel industry will spend 627 million dollars in 1949 to expand and improve production facilities, American Iron and Steel Institute said today.

This compares with the record 583 million dollars spent by iron and steel companies for plant expansion and improvement in 1948, the institute said.

By the end of the year, the institute said, it is expected that the Nation's steelmaking capacity will exceed 98,300,000 tons, a record total. An additional 500,000 tons will be added in 1950.

National Group Plans Drive on Men's Wear

New York, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—An industry-wide campaign to sell more men's clothing was endorsed today by the annual convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers.

The plan envisages a cooperative campaign of all elements in the industry from mill to retailer covering style development, industry advertising, store merchandising service and economic research to guide the industry.

The association has enlisted the aid of a number of allied associations and has pledged contributions toward a suggested goal of $400,000 for operations during the first year.

U. S. Steel Asks 3-for-1 Splitup, Votes $1 Extra

New York, Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Directors of United States Steel Corp., whose far-flung operations gained a world's peacetime production record in 1948, recommended today a split of the common stock on a three-for-four basis.

The directors also declared a special dividend of $1 a share on the common stock and the usual dividend of $1.25 a share.

If the stockholders approve the stock split at their May 2 meeting, it will be the first time in history that "Big Steel" has taken such a financial step.

The corporation reported that its record production in 1948 resulted in net income of $129,552,244, equal to $1.99 a common share. The net, subject to minor year-end adjustment, compares with 1947 net of $127,098,148, or $1.71 a share.

The directors' announcement came after the close of the New York Stock Exchange at 3 p. m. Eastern Standard Time.

Big Steel reported net income of $41,510,270, or $4.05 a common share for the final quarter of 1948, compared with $34,599,132, or $3.25 a share, in the preceding quarter and $29,397,811 or $2.63 a share for the last three months of 1947.

The giant of the industry gained its peacetime record in 1948 with shipments totaling 20,597,570 net tons, exceeding the revised figure of 20,252,000 tons in 1947. The wartime record was 21,052,000 tons shipped in 1944.

So What? No One Moves To the Rear, Anyhow

Hank Hawkins doesn't believe in waiting for items to happen; he anticipates them. This department is therefore able to report in advance (it's the Pearson influence from the next page) what is sure to happen soon after transit radio makes its bow here.

"The motorman will call out 'Please move to the rear of the car,' and the voice from the loudspeaker will whisper: 'Don't make a move without calling Smith.'"

Robert Haas of 2964 McKinley st. nw. wants to know whether our printers regard themselves as "alley slaves." Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne.

"What's the matter, son?" asked the driver. "I lost my fare," replied the lad, between sobs. "Hop on," said the driver. "You can pay me tomorrow." And (says Jim) you should have seen everybody in the bus smile. . . . The records list No. 2222 as Samuel E. Pitts of 5803 E. Pine dr., Riverdale, Md.—a Capital Transit employee for 15 years. . . . Jonas Clifton of Alexandria, Va., observes that it's tough to find housing these days. If you have children. "Unless," he adds, "you use a little ingenuity. PEOPLE ARE NICER THAN ANYBODY

Yellow Cab's Floyd Montgomery observed the other day that I hadn't been carrying any items about cab drivers lately. I'm sure Floyd won't be disturbed by the fact that the first one I found was about a Bell driver. I got his story from D. E. B. of 3338 C st. se., who reported:

"When I paid my fare, I inadvertently dropped my wallet on the floor of the cab. I didn't realize my loss until the next day.

"By that time I had no recollection of the driver, or the type of cab I had been in. Mentally, I kissed my money and papers goodbye.

"The next day I hailed a passing cab at the same spot, and as luck would have it, I got the same taxi and the same driver. He was on his way to my house, to return the missing wallet.

"What's more, he absolutely refused to accept any reward for his honesty and kindness. Don't you think the driver of Bell Cab No. 1 deserves a plug?"

I sure do. The records reveal that he's Clarence A. Watkins of 501 Wells ave., Hyattsville, Md.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. W. H. Kibler, jr., 620 New York ave., Washington, W. Va.: Yes, I suppose you could call him "the little man who wasn't there." Actually, he's a half-column picture which the engravers failed to finish in time for the first edition. The type is set "half-column measure" for 14 lines to accommodate the "cut," and when the picture fails to show up by edition time, they've just got to roll 'em without it.

OUCH!

Not having a television set, I'm just catching up with this incident, which happened several weeks ago.

Local video fans are still chuckling about the night WMAL-TV showed a movie about a fellow who (in the course of his adventures) became a radio announcer.

The hero's choice of stations was rather unfortunate for WMAL-TV. It showed him working before a microphone bearing the call letters of its rival, WRC.

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air. Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

VALUE: When Albert Einstein left Jewish Hospital last week he prepared a statement for the press and advised the hospital's director, Dr. Hinenburg, to save the statement, which was in longhand. "Who knows—it may be worth something someday," said Einstein, and then told of being approached by a publishing firm about writing a book for laymen about his theories on relativity. . . . Einstein wrote a manuscript, which was so complex that the publishers decided laymen couldn't understand it—but the firm paid the scientist $20,000 for the manuscript, because it was written in longhand. "I can make more money writing a book that no one will ever read," he said, "than I can by writing one that everybody will see."

RECOGNITION: At the Joe Davies reception a newspaperman up to Agnes Meyer, the newspaperwoman and wife of Eugene Meyer. She didn't recognize him and he reminded her: "I am the most reactionary person you've ever met." Mrs. Meyer beamed in recognition: "Why, Senator Wherry—how are you?"

SPREE: Eric Hawkins tells of the late Sparrow Robertson, the venerable reporter for the Paris Herald, who refused to leave the city when the Nazis came, and who died there. On the morning of the occupation, Robertson awoke on a bench along the Champs Elysees. He half opened his eyes and saw the Nazi troops marching. He stared at the goose-steppers, then turned to his companion and said: "Now did I ever get to Berlin, this bender? So help me, I've never been that drunk before."

Snyder Seen Upsetting Tax Plans

By Drew Pearson

The exit of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek recalls Drew Pearson's column of November 26, in which he flatly stated: "Chiang Kai-shek is finished—even though he refused to face the fact. He will be fortunate to hold on to his job for the next 60 days." It was exactly 61 days later that Chiang got out. Pearson predicted in the same column that Chiang's successor would be Li Tsung-jen—who now has taken over.

Administration spokesmen on Capitol Hill are beginning to wonder whether President Truman's tax program may be another victim of "government-by-crony." In this case the crony is good old John Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury.

The enactment of a modified excess-profits tax on corporations was recommended by Truman in both his 1948 message on the state of the union and in his address to the special session of Congress last July.

It was recommended, however, despite the violent objection of John Snyder, who was so opposed to the President that he turned to his council of economic advisers for tax advice.

This year, with corporate profits at an all-time high, such Administration stalwarts as Representative John D. Dingell (Mich.), Representative Herman Eberhart (Pa.), and Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Wyo.), came to the conclusion that another excess-profits tax recommendation was certain to come from the White House. So they prepared bills for an excess-profits tax to be introduced in the Eighty-first Congress.

Much to their amazement, however, they were left out on the limb when the Truman State of the Union message significantly omitted any reference to an excess-profits tax.

Inside story is that Economic Council member John Clark, head of an important fiscal group on fiscal policy, finally gave up the fight for an excess-profits tax because of the obdurate sabotage and opposition of Secretary Snyder—long considered the President's closest personal friend.

Snyder has even gone to the extent of placing his Treasury tax technicians "under wraps." They are not available for conference with the President's staff or with Administration leaders at the Capitol. Snyder even went so far as to refuse a request from Budget Director Webb for the major outlines of a Treasury tax program to be included in the President's budget message.

Secretary Snyder is now conferring in secret session with congressional leaders, but for the first time in recent history a Secretary of the Treasury will have no alternative recommendations to present. Instead he will submit several "alternatives."

The chaos within the Treasury is emphasized by Snyder's refusal to choose between Assistant Secretary John Graham of North Carolina and General Counsel Tom Lynch of Ohio to represent him in policy discussions with congressional staffs.

White House aides privately admit that the lack of cooperation from the Treasury is frustrating and that the Truman-Snyder friendship presents a serious hurdle to the attainment of a "fair deal" tax program.

Bricker vs. Dewey

Governor Dewey was tongue-tied in the back by his former running mate, Senator John Bricker of Ohio, one day before President Truman's Inauguration. At a testimonial dinner in honor of Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, Bricker was introduced as Dewey's running mate in 1944. "It is true," snapped Bricker, "I campaigned with Dewey in '44, for Dewey in '48—and if Dewey had campaigned for himself, we would be inaugurating a different man tomorrow."

Note—Most politicians agree it was the record of such Republicans in Congress as Bricker that really defeated Dewey.

Housing Revolt

Another revolt has broken out against the President's public housing program. This time, however, the shooting doesn't come from the real estate lobby, but from some of Truman's strongest housing allies in the Congress.

Senators Burnet Maybank of South Carolina and John Sparkman of Alabama, Representative Frank Buchanan of Pennsylvania and other liberals are up in arms about the Administration's bill, introduced by Senator Ellender of Louisiana, which does nothing about the plight of war veterans in the $2000 to $3600 a year income group.

Inside fact is that the Ellender bill was written chiefly by Ray Foley, director of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, reportedly chummy with some of the big real estate lobby groups.

Foley and his aides made no provision for helping to finance the $2,000-$3,600 income group, though President Truman has repeatedly told housing leaders that this group—which Truman called the "backbone" of the Nation—should be helped to buy homes, by direct Government loans if necessary.

Merry-Go-Round

After Secretary of State Dean Acheson was confirmed by a Senate vote of 82-6, he announced the news to his Negro chauffeur, "I wonder," puzzled the chauffeur, "why the other fellow ran if he couldn't get but six votes."
